The Evening Chit-Chat By RUTH CAMERON

S we were passing through a narrow passageway leading toward the trains in a certain big depot the other night three men bore down upon us, running as if for dear life, and, as they tornadoed past, knocked my companion's umbrella from his hand.

He picked it up, brushed it off, opened his mouth as if to speak, and then closed it again, without speaking.

I tried to relieve his feelings by railing against the abominable rudeness and carelessness of the feelings of others that some people show, but, to my surprise, he didn't seem to feel grateful.

"What's the matter," I queried, "why don't you say something?"

"What's the matter," I queried, "why don't you say something?"
"Well, you know," he answered, "I was going to say something quite vigorous, and then I stopped to think first if I might not have done the same thing in their places. You see it's eleven o'clock, and that was their last train. If they'd missed it they'd have had to stay here all night or take a two-hour trip on the electrics. I suppose I might have been a little bit careless myself if I'd had their reasons for hurry-

"I try to make it a plan never to let myself get angry at anyone until I've put myself in the other fellow's place and been able to say, 'I know I wouldn't have done it under How's that for a plan? Whenever a wave of indignation or resentment or displeasure against anyone sweeps over you, try to force it back until you have 'put yourself in his place."

I think it is a pretty good plan.
I have tried it several times, and like my companion of the other night, I can't give myself the right to be angry very often.
I tried it the other day in a lunch room.
I ordered some salad. It arrived without bread and butter. The waitress, having deposited it, scooted away, and apparently did not contemplate returning. After waiting several minutes, I inquired mildly of a waitress who strayed near my table if they didn't serve bread and butter with salad there. "She's getting it for you just as fast as she can." she snapped.
I had inquired mildly and didn't thin't I deserved any such reply, so my first impulse was to be vexed with the waitress for being a disagreeable old thing. And then I made myself stop and think, "Suppose I'd worked hard all day, and was tired, and suppose I heard some one casting what I considered an aspersion upon a sister waitress, who also had worked hard, wasn't it just possible that I might have resented it in a similar manner?"

ented it in a similar manner?"

And I felt so very uncertain of the answer that I had to make myself swallow my indignation post haste.

A most interesting and eye-opening plan, truly! Won't you try it the next time you are inclined to feel indignant or resentful against or superior to anybody?

NO many women the most puzzling problem that Christmas brings is, "What shall I get him?"

The list of possibilities seems surprisingly small, and as you run over them, and over them again, nothing seems to quite suit. It is so much harder to buy for a man than for a woman.

Wait a minute! Have you thought of the Gillette Safety Razor?

That's a gift worth while. A Gillette, whether Standard Set, Pocket Edition or Combination Set, in gold or silver plate or gun metal finish, looks good—and is good. To the man who has used the open-blade razor or a make-shift safety, the Gillette is a revelation of comfort and convenience.

"But," you object, "he always goes to the barber." Does he? Then he wastes a week's time or more every year, to say nothing of money. The Gillette will give him a clean, comfortable shave in three minutes, every morning in the year.

You see the Gillette habit is well worth encouraging. Your hardware dealer, druggist or jeweler can show you a splendid
