ANOTHER BUSY DAY IN POLICE COURT

Magistrate Jay Has a Variety of Cases to Deal With-Three Theft Charges

Magistrate Jay had quite a collection who numbered four. Theft charges come second with three. Six of these cases were heard within an hour and the other three were remanded, two of them until to-morrow and one of them for a week. The two are theft charges and the latter one of non-suppor brought by a wife.

Of the four Grunks two were Hindus who had taken all the frills that were o be had including a ride in the hurry. up wagon. They were each assessed $4. Another drunk who had been able to walk to the police station escaped with a fine of $3, while the fourth had put up $10 bail and as he did not appear this was estreated.

Douglas Matheson, head waiter at Strand cafe, was marged with assault by Mrs. Ada Bertha Dakin, According to the woman's story she had worked there as a waitress but had been taken ill. As soon as she was better she returned to the cafe and was told to go to work in the morning. When she did this next morning Matheson, according to her evidence, ordered her out and when she refused to go until the proprietor appeared, he grabbed her by the arm to shove her out.

Matheson called two waiters, J mpson and Wallace Scott, who swore that they had heard Matheson order her out but had not seen him touch the woman although they were there all the time. After these two men had been heard the magistrate dismis the case without calling upon Mr. Matheson to go into the box on his own

Mrs. Dakin also had her husband ned for non-support, but this case was adjourned at the request of courts. The couple had been married in this city in 1902 and had gone to live at Carmanah, but the woman was not satisfied there and had induced her husband to come back to the city. Since then she had gone down hill. Only last month, however, her husband had paid $60 through Capt. James Gaudin, agent of marine and fisheries, ployed. Dakin was now employed on order to save his position had had to leave the city last evening. He, ac-cordingly, asked for a remand, and in doing so pointed out that Dakin might be gone a month, but that he could al-ways be communicated with. The magistrate remanded the case until next Monday.

John Pratt appeared for the theft of ome carpenter tools from William Smith, his particular method having been to borrow the tools and then pawn them.
William Smith, blacksmith, of 755

Pandora avenue, swore that on May 23rd Pratt had come to him and told him he was hungry and that he had a job at carpentering in sight to com-mence May 27th, but he had no tools. He gave him $1.50 and promised him the loan of the necessary tools. On May 26th he had lent the tools to There were a large number of cases | Pratt. These included two saws, spirit the court.
