THE REINDEER
This Animal is Taking Important Place in America.
The reindeer is the department store of the far north; he produces everything from a pool of thread to a milk can. He is jack-of-all-trades, meat market, dairy, haberdasher, tailor, shoemaker, notion counter and jinxer all rolled into one. He is even legal tender in the natives in Arctic and sub-Arctic lands where a piece of pink soap can buy almost as much as a gold nugget. In 1890 Dr. Sheldon Jackson turned up the collar of his fur coat and shuffled through northern snows on an inspecting tour of the mission stations. He discovered that the natives in Arctic and sub-Arctic lands were rapidly losing their source of food supply. The whales had taken it into their heads to swim farther north away from the coast, and the Eskimos of modern hunters; the walrus and seal followed them and disappeared. The wild caribou, simple creatures that the Eskimos and Arctic Indians had caught easily, had been frightened away by the efficient guns of traders. Eskimos losing the greater part of their food, their clothing supply also had stopped, because for years the Eskimos had traded ivory walrus tusks, seal skin and whale oil for Siberian reindeer skins. Dr. Jackson suggested his plan of importing reindeer from Siberia. There had never been reindeer on this continent and the Eskimos know nothing about the animals. A private fund of $2,000 was raised by people personally interested in Dr. Jackson's plan and the first herd of sixteen reindeer was brought across Behring Strait from Siberia and landed in good condition. Siberian herders, said a little later the more intelligent and efficient Laplanders, were imported to teach the native Eskimos and Indians the ways and whereabouts of the deer. In 1892, 1,289 deer had been imported; at the last report in 1914 there were 35,000 Government deer in Alaska, rapidly increasing. When the deer are two years old they are broken in for driving. A deer makes an average speed of from eight to twelve miles an hour. But it is not his speed that makes him invaluable as a means of transportation; it is the fact that the deer can travel across Alaska without a trail, living on the moss which carpets the country. Dogs cannot haul enough provisions to feed themselves on long journeys, while one of these camels of the north can haul two hundred pounds of cargo, up mountains and down valleys, and finish the journey in as good condition, if not better, physical shape than when the trip was begun. Each Arctic mission station should own at least 5,000 deer. In the first place, a herd of deer banishes all terror of famine, hunger and extreme cold. The milk of the deer is thick and creamy, and mixed with water makes a delicious drink; venison has always been considered a luxury. In the second place, the reindeer is adapted through selling the young fawns and the meat of the older deer can eventually support the mission. And thirdly, there is always present an efficient and comfortable method of travel.

AUSTRIAN CLAIMS

By Courier Leased Wire
Vienna, Monday, Sept. 16.—Via London—Italian patrols were repulsed in the Mori and Monte Ciameone sectors, according to an official statement issued at the war office to-day. In the Setti Communi (seven communes) several Italian thrusts failed, the statement adds, but in the Brenta valley the enemy pressed an advanced post back slightly. In the Albania coastal region, the statement continues, the Italians have vainly attempted to recover ground won from them during the past two days.
