DO YOUR LEVEL BEST.

Put the Right Spirit Into Your Work and Keep Your Ideals High.

Put the right spirit into your work.

Treat your calling as divine, as a call from principle. If the thing itself be not important, the spirit in which you take hold of it makes all the difference in the world to you. It can make or mar the man. You cannot afford grumbling service or botched work in your life's record. You cannot afford to form a habit of half doing things or of doing them in the spirit of a drudge, for this will drag its slimy trail through all your subsequent career, always humiliating you at the most unexpected moments. Let other people do the poor jobs, the botched work, if they will.

Keep your standards up, your ideals high.

The attitude with which a man approaches his task has everything to do with the quality and efficiency of his work and with its influence upon his character. What a man does is a part of himself. It is the self expression of what he stands for. Our life work is an outpouring of our ambition, our ideals, our real selves. If you see a man's work, you see the man.

No one can respect himself or have the sublime faith in himself which is essential to all high achievements when he puts mean, half hearted, slipshod service into what he does. He cannot get his highest self approval until he does his level best.—Success.

A GIRL'S HEELS

Her Shoes Said to Be an Index to

Her Character.

"If you want to know whether a girl is slovenly or not look at her heels," said the wise woman to the young man who was contemplating matrimony. "Her gown may be pretty, her hat becoming, her neckwear trim and neat and her gloves well fitting, but if her heels are run over look out for her. Her trimness in other respects simply denotes that she is neat spasmodically, that she will make an effort to keep things tidied and in order only when she is urged to or because she has some special provocation. But by nature she is slack. The man that marries a girl with perpetually run over heels will find her coming to the breakfast table as soon as the honeymoon is over in a tumbled kimono and with her hair in curl papers. She never will be a good housekeeper.

"On the other hand, I've seen girls who maybe did not have such a trim appearance, whose hair was apt to be a little flying, but whose heels rested firmly on the ground, and never did I discover they were in the slovenly class. Maybe they were not careful enough of outward appearances, but they kept their buttons sewed on, rips repaired, spots sponged off and their rooms in immaculate order."—Ex-

Envy.

"I wish I were strong and healthy, and magnificent as that man over there," sighed the delicate, thin man, "but, then, it isn't worth while to envy people, to envy anybody, in this old world. I had a friend once who was taller than he and finer and more magnificent, a man of splendid physique.

You'd think, to look at him, that he would have lived forever, but he is dead now. Died of some slight trouble of indigestion that a delicate man might have lived through, and this is all I have left to remind me of him, this ring with this handsome intaglio.

It is almost priceless to me and, in fact, almost priceless of itself. Intaglios are very rare these days. This is exceedingly rare. Some time I will send you a letter and seal it with the ring, so you can have the intaglio also to remind you that it isn't worth while to envy anybody in this old world."

Bismarck as a Drinker.

When Bismarck was in London in 1843 he was invited to visit the famous brewery of Barclay & Perkins, and his hosts, having heard of his reputation as a beer drinker of great prowess, presented to him an enormous tankard of old ale, in the confident expectation that he would be obliged to admit himself vanquished by it. "I seized the tankard," Bismarck told Sir Charles Dilke, who recounted the story, "and I thought of my country and drank to Prussia and tilted it till it was empty. Then I thanked my entertainers—courteously, I hope—and succeeded in making my way as far as London bridge. There I sat down in one of the stone recesses, and for hours the great bridge went round and round me."

The Great American Boss.

The average American is blasé almost before the English girl is ready to leave her school, says a writer. The English girl never leaves her governess and home, before she is eighteen, while at the same age the American girl has seen much of the world. Yet the American girl retains her vivacity and her interest in everything, and it is that one quality, I think, above all others that wins for her the admiration of the Englishwoman. The American woman never looks to her husband as master, while the Englishwoman is taught to do so from her birth.—Tit-

Bits.

Makes One Feel Worse.

It is a fact that one can feel how bad he really feels without feeling worse. The way to feel good is to not talk too much about your ills.

Think how well you are, how well you have done and feel good about it, and if there is anything the matter with you think it won't last long and that it is not worth thinking about.—Exchange.

Editor Planet.—A subscriber to The Planet, recently, after complimenting me on my letters, stated that he would consider it a favor if I would give further information about the old Tower of Dover. Unfortunately, I have not the Dover letter referring to the old Roman Lighthouse. However, in looking over the history of Dover, I find the following:

The Roman Pharos or Lighthouse

—The Pharos dates from the government of Aulus Plautius, A. D.

43 and 47, if not earlier, and beacon fires were lit on it, and on the north face, marked 1259. The old church, tower and nave were undoubtedly erected as a Roman fort, about the middle of the third century, and connected with the Pharos at each of the three storeys. This work was converted into a Christian church in the fourth century by the Romans, and is the oldest consecrated building in the British Isles. In Norman times in the year 1224, the space under the tower was vaulted and the north and south transept arches and present entrance door inserted.

Mr. Editor, allow me on behalf of my humble self to thank you for publishing my letters in The Planet.
