

Fairbanks Accused Of Sharp Practise

(Deseret News, March 14 1910.)

Alexander R. Curtis secretary and manager of the Granite Coal & Fuel company, accused Frank Fairbanks, president of the company, this morning with underhanded methods and sharp practise in answer to the suit brought against him about three weeks ago in the Third district court in which he is charged with appropriating about $7,000 of the company's money to his own use. Between March 19 and May 11, 1909, Curtis asserts that Fairbanks drew out of the cash register about $750 and went to Canada, without rendering an account. Besides this, he declares that Fairbanks is in the grocery business in Salt Lake and that Fairbanks would deposit the money from his private business in the name of the company and then draw it out every little while. In doing this Curtis said that it was impossible to keep an account of the fuel company's business. Fairbanks profited from this arrangement, he says. Fairbanks is also charged with building a barn out of the profits of the company. He attempted to keep it a secret from Curtis, he says. Sidwell, who is also a director of the company was associated with Fairbanks in his deal averse. Curtis says that the company owes him $554 for his services and $120 for rent, and he asks judgement for this amount. In answer to the suit brought against him Curtis denies that the company did $21,000 worth of business while he was manager and the $7,000 of it was profit. He states that with A. M. Faldima and George Sidwell that he leased some ground at 139 east Second South street, and erected a building on it as a matter of speculation for rent. This building adjoins the fuel company's establishment. On account of the growth of business the company had to have more room and part of this building was rented. Curtis says that he and Sidwell and Fairbanks decided that it would be more convenient to rent this place than to move to some other place. The rent Curtis says was cheap and that the building was not erected with money belonging to the company. He asks that the complaint be dismissed against him and that he be given judgement against the company for $674.
