brought in the mail as usual. Father eagerly took a letter which seemed to have been expected from the other letters. I noticed a disturbed expression upon his face as he read it; and I was more anxiou than surprised when he arose and went to the hall door and called to the girl who was in the dining-room " Mary," said he, "tell Joseph to harness Prince at once. I must ge to the Junction in time for the o'clock express. He'll have to finish his supper when he gets back."

Then he turned and said that the letter contained intelligence that made it necessary that he should go to New York that night. Of course, as the wife and daughter of a busin-ess man, we knew what he meant and that there was not a word of remonstrance to be said. So mother went to make for him what preparation was needful, and I should have followed her a moment later, but

Naturally enough I opened my lips to utter a little cry, but he stoped me by a single threatening thought I should feel less anxious to have it with me than to allow it to remain in the safe at the office. I cannot, of course, take it to New York, so I want you to take charge of it and keep it till to-merrow merning, and then carry it to Randall for I lest word changed for the moam going to tell you something that wheeling my chair at the same time, my surprise was our man Joseph.

Then he stepped into the buggy, and they drove away into the darkness and rain

I did not send a message to Harry, however. Indeed, I laughed as little as I thought of father's anxiety He was almost as timid as mother, after all.

I was of a rather an easy, careless disposition, and really had not a particle of fear of having the money in my keeping. And as we two sat there in the library for-a leng time after this, mother dozing in the big chair, and I intent upon some fancy work which I was anxious to finish in time for a friend's birthday. I forgot altogether the package of money that lay at the bottom of my dress pocket

Joseph did not get back until after 10 o'clock, although it was only three miles to the Junction, and he should have been home long before that hour.

We thought little of that, however.

We thought little of lower a way into the dark nees and run my mind what I ought to do.

What would these two men do when they found, as they soon weuld find, that the money was not up stairs? They would be disappointed and desperate—capable, perhaps, of deeds that they had not at first intended.

Perhaps I had better give up the money at once and so get rid of them. And yet, father had confided it to my care; and it did not belong to him, but to the company. I ought not to give it to these mon if I could help it. Oh, why could I make Joseph hear away out, in the wing of the house as he was? Alas! I knew that I could not even had not this man been sitting there by the door he had taken a chair now—eyeing me fercely as though he read my thought the find, that the money was not up stairs? They would be disappointed. However, as I said, our liver and attented to my keeping were safe; and we were thankful for that.

And I may say again that I am wenty glad that, at that time at least, the telegraph had not been super seded by the telegraph had not been super seded by the telegraph had not been super s sale low by

We live in the county of Oakbrook and my father is treasurer and superintendant of the Oakbrook mills. Our house—a very pleasant county and is a quarter of a mile from the mills. That is why a telegraph wire was placed between the two.

I promised father when it was put up that I would learn to send measures over it. There was no one elear one. Both my brethers were away at boarding-school, and mother would as soon have thought of studying the Chinese language as telegraphy.
