being a reduction of 9s. 5d., or nearly one-third of the whole bulk. I find that for the rest of the foreign world, excludfor the rest of the foreign world, excluding the British possessions, the figures in 1871 were £62,188,554, and in 1880 £60,714.561. showing the trade remaining very much the same. But in the British possessions the trade had risen from £51,250,213 in 1871 to £75,254,179 in 1880. Now I take it that is a very remarkable statement—your trade with all way. markable statement—your trade with all the great nations of Europe and the United States had fallen off nearly one-third, that your trade with the rest of the world was at a standstill, and that your trade with your possessions had risen 50 per cent. That is only half the case. The other half, if you will allow me, I will now proceed to state. There are such things as imports of manufacture. case. The other half, if you will allow me, I will now proceed to state. There are such things as imports of manufactured goods as well as exports, and it may be well to look where they come from. The European countries I have named and the United States send to this country manufactured goods, what we call the produce of the loom them to which she can be shown to work this country annufactured goods, what we call the produce of the loom textile fabrics, &c., &c. They sent us in 1871 £36,003,074, and in 1880 £57,329,224. The increase of your exports to them had fallen off, and your imports from them risen from £36,003,074 to £58,329,224. The rest of the world stood nearly equal, about £2,000,000. Now, bringing those figures down to the question of percentage, I find this result—that the export trade of this country, without reference to the imports, in 1871, to the large manufacturing countries of Europe and the United States, and after hands of an American form and fallen to 39 per cent. In 1880 they had fallen to 39 per cent. In 1870 to 27 per cent. in 1880 they had fallen from 22 per cent. in 1871 to 27 per cent. in 1880, the British possessions had risen from 22 per cent. in 1871 to 1871 per cent. in 1880. But considerand I am now speaking with reference.

Millton on Matrimony. to $4 per cent. in 1880. But considerand I am now speaking with reference to the question of the employment of labor and capital in this country—that every pound's sterling worth of goods imported by you represents the displacement of so much labor in this country, if we could produce the same goods at a profit. We, therefore, must consider what amount of goods we same goods at a profit. We, therefore, must consider what amount of goods we have imported from those countries, and how the balance stands with reference to the employment that is given to our laboring population and capital. And this is the result, and it is a remarkable one: in 1871, deducting the imports of manufactured goods, Fance, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Spain, Italy, and the United States furnish 40 per cent. of the entire trade; in 1880 it had fallen to 18 per cent. The rest of the foreign world had risen from 33 per cent. to 37 per cent., and the colonies had risen from 27 per cent. to 45 per cent. Now, Provost, per cent. to 45 per cent. Now, Provost, I think I have proved my case. These are figures which may be submitted to any other provided to any other provide are Board of Trade figures, and I will wouch for their accuracy; and the proof is that, taking the employment of capital and labour as presented by the import and export trade in manufactured goods, the British possessions are very nearly furnishing one-half of your trade. It is natural in such a case that disappointment should have followed marriage, and that the vexed husband should enlarge on the misery of a man who shall find himself figures for 1881-82, the years subsequent to this comparison, those figures, I pledge myself, carry out the same result even more strongly that has been stated. The increase of the many state of the same result and phlegm, with whom he looked to be the co-partner of a sweet and gladsome existence. increase of your export trade has more than half been due to the demands of your colonies. Now, Provost and gentlemen, is it possible that as men of business, desiring to see this country prosper, looking in the most selfish light possible, that you can look with indifference to the two points—to the one either that your pops.
