DEATH'S FERRYMAN.

BY MISS ALICE GARY.
Boatman, thine I've call'd thee o'er,
Waiving at life's solemn shore,
Tracing, in the silver sand,
Letters till thy boat should land.

Drifting out alone with thee,
Towards the clime I cannot see,
Read to me the strange device
Graven on thy wand of ice.

Push the curls of golden hue
From thy eyes of starlit down,
And behold me where I stand,
Brocking thy boat to land.

Where the river mist so pale,
Trembles like a bridal veil,
O'er thy lovely drooping tree,
One that loves me waits for me.

Hier, sweet Deathman, hear my call !
Last year, with the tempest's fall,
Resting for pain laid him in,
Crossed she in that boat of thine ?

When the corn shall cease to grow,
And the rye-field's silver flow,
At the reaper's feet is laid,
Crossing, spike the lovely maid.

Dearest love, another year,
Thou shalt meet this Deathman here—
The white fingers of despair
Playing with his golden hair.

From this silver sanded shore,
Beckon him to row thee o'er;
Where thy solemn shadows be,
I shall wait thee—come and see.

There! the white smile float and flow,
One in heaven and one below;
And I hear a low voice cry,
Ferryman of Death am I.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

Does it require a long time, days, weeks, months, and years to enable human beings to love one another? Does the human heart slowly and suspiciously lay up one kind, thoughts after another, till the measure of its affection be full? May gentle words and kindly smiles pass from the lips and eyes, and yet the heart remain cold and hard—and without even a glimmer of hope to subdue the object of its treasury? It may be so with many, for the incidents of time often distract them all; but surely necessary and wholesome perhaps, to different hearts; but before human nature has been sorely afflicted, tried or deceived, its temper open to kindness and joy, and attracted by the sympathies of a common nature, why may not those who are strangers to-day be better friends to-morrow? Nor does the deepest affliction always close the fountains of love into the human soul. Like light streaming in upon a prison through the bars of his dungeon, the smile of faces not yet dimmed by grief to the man of many miseries, has often been close to his soul, will often lay down that rough burden to which he has been clinging with infatuated despair, at this young, beauty, and innocence rare, before him is an untamed, fearless and triumphant bliss. There are, too, sudden revelations of sympathy made between human beings by a word, a tone, a look; smile; truth is then conveyed suddenly and easily into these spirits, and from that moment, they rest promising on each other's affections and each other's worth, as if they had been known for years. If there were not strong and prevailing tendencies in our nature, the paths of human life would be barren indeed; or the friendships that spring up between us would generally be sown by the hand of interest and self-love. But love follows other processes; and love and friendship bad buds blossom in the course of a few sunny and dewy hours of one vernal morning.

DRAKE.—There is scarcely a word in the English language that seems to be so studiously avoided by every body, as the one at the head of this paragraph. We wish the thing were as uncommon as the word. The last synonym we have observed is "tight," a term which strikes us as rather inappropriate, since a "tight" man in the case of the word is almost always a "loose character." We give a list of a few of the various words and phrases which have been in use, at one time or another, to signify some of these states of mind.—Over the bay, half-mast over, hot, high, corned, eat, cocked, half-cocked, dinned, janned, damaged, sleepy, ed, top heavy, fuddled, giddy, tipsy, unsteady, tipsy, cracked, cracked, saluted, how are ye, on the lar, all sail set, three sheets in the wind, well under weigh, lattered, blowing hossy, sawed, snubbed, screwed, sonked, comfortable, stimulated, jing-stemmed, tangle-legged, fogmatic blue-eyed, a passenger in the Cape Ann stage, striped, faint, shot in the neck, hamboosed, weak-jointed, got a brick in his hat, got a turkey on his back.—Burlington Sentinel.

CUSTOM.—When railways were first established, every living being gazed a passing train with astonishment and fear; ploughmen held their breath, the loose horse galloped from it, and then, suddenly stopping turned round, stared at it, and at last snorted aloud. But the "nine days' wonder" soon came to an end. At the train now flies through our verdant fields, the cattle grazing on each side, do not even raise their heads to look at it; the timid sheep know it no more than the wild boar; indeed, the poor village running with her brood along the roadside, does not even notice it, nor is it even enough that it passes close by. It is the same with mankind. On entering a railway station, we merely mutter to the clerk where we want to go, say "How much?" see it almost horridly take a card into a little machine that pinches it—receive our ticket—take our place—read our newspaper—on reaching our terminus drive away perfectly careless of all or any of the immemorable arrangements necessary for the astonishing luxury we have enjoyed.

BUTTER.—In Ornithology.—The quills of the feathers of birds are air vessels, which can be emptied and filled at pleasure. The gannet or solan goose, is a beautiful instance of this wonderful provision; it lives on fish, and paves the greatest portion of its time either in the air or on the water; even in the most tempestuous weather it can be seen floating like a cork on the wildest waves. It can even force air between its skin and body to such a degree, that it becomes as light and buoyant as a bladder.

A San Francisco paper examines that several gentlemen of that city have resolved to make the experiment of manufacturing porcelain out of the immense quantity of powdered quartz which is to be obtained in the mining districts. The labour of the Chinese, who are daily flocking to California, it is thought, can be advantageously employed in this business.

Misfortune is never mortal to the soul that accepts it; for such as always say that every cloud is the angel's face. Every man deserves that his primary trials and temptations, which are the hardest of all others to bear; but they are so, simply because they are the very ones he needs most.—Mrs. Child.

Doctor, do you think this thin shoe is bad for consumption?" "Not at all, my love—it is what it lives on."

The largest bell known in the world is that of the Kremlin, at Moscow; its weight is estimated at 445,772 pounds. The largest in England is the Great Tom, of Oxford.

A Judge of Probate in Minnesota territory has decided, that if the government enlist a married man, it must provide suitable accommodation for his wife, and that every enlisted soldier may have a wife provided for.

Whenever we drink too deeply of pleasure, we find a sediment at the bottom of the cup, which inhibits the fine draught we have quaffed with so much avidity.

When the Mexican war broke out, a friend of ours joined the army "just for glory," and he got it; one broken arm, a pair of crutches, and a chronic diarrhoea.

Intemperance is the grossest abuse of the gifts of Providence.

REMOVAL.

H. Found, Tailor, Habit & Robe-maker.
THE Subscriber having removed his Establishment to the premises lately occupied by Mr. William Simard, situate on the North side of Queen's Square, a favorable opportunity presents itself, of thanking the public for their extensive patronage and support, for nearly 12 years; and he is more desirous than ever for its continuance, as nothing shall be wanted on his part, to give entire satisfaction.

Punctuality in business is a desideratum, which can only be supplied by a man exclusive to his profession, on the part of the employees and apprentices. That "punctuality begins punctuality," is the very best maxim that can be observed; and the Subscriber is as anxious as any Man in the Trade, that it should be adopted.

H. feels assured, with his present facilities, that he will be able to meet the wishes of all, who may be disposed to employ him; and having engaged the best workmen to make up garments of his cutting, they will be found superior to those produced in any other establishment in the town.

N. B. Those parties whose unmet accounts are of long standing, unless paid without further delay, will be sued without distinction.

Mr. JOHN M'KINNON,
TAILOR and HABIT-MAKER, respectfully acquaints his Friends and the public generally, that he has removed his Business to the House of Mr. John McGill, Upper Queen Street, next door to Doctor Pitt's, and that he will continue to execute all orders for him.

J. M'K., takes this opportunity of returning thanks to the Gentleman who have so liberally supported him for the last 18 years, and now informs them, that as he makes up garments of his own cutting upon approved principles, he feels assured they will be found superior to those produced by any Man in the Trade.

OF A BAD LEG OF MORE THAN SIXTY FEET STANDING.

Mr. Barker, of No. 5, Grosvenor's Place, Drypool, near Hull, had a child covered with Ringworm for more than six years; in vain he exhausted all his art in his endeavours to effect a cure. Not succeeding, he consulted among his brethren, the most celebrated medical practitioners of the City, and, having given up all hope of getting a cure, was about to give up, when he was persuaded to try Holloway's Pill and Ointment, which he did, and however wonderful it may appear, the leg was thoroughly healed by means of it, and by continuing to use the Pill alone after his leg was well, he has become in health as bold and hearty as now. I am well known to the public, having for 20 years past, been a member of the 2d Regiment of Foot.

N. B.—The truth of this extraordinary statement can be vouchsafed for by Mr. J. C. Headon, 22, Market Place, Hull. February 29, 1850.

CURE OF A DESPERATE CASE OF RINGWORM, OF SIX YEARS' STANDING.

LIVERPOOL, 15th June, 1849.

One of the most eminent Surgeons in Lima (the Capital of Peru) had a child covered with Ringworm for more than six years; in vain he exhausted all his art in his endeavours to effect a cure. Not succeeding, he consulted among his brethren, the most celebrated medical practitioners of the City, and, having given up all hope of getting a cure, was about to give up, when he was persuaded to try Holloway's Pill and Ointment, which he did, and however wonderful it may appear, the leg was thoroughly healed by means of
