had gone back to the woods. The place where she says she saw him was behind a large tree turned up by the roots. This place is so situated that the girl was out of sight for a very short time, but it was almost impossible for any one one to pass from it to the awam, (as she says he did) without being observed by Mr. and Mrs. Wild. This circumstance, tends to show that the whole story is an invention, though what motive the girl can have for telling these falsehoods (if such they are) is hard to discover. It is likely that further investigation will be made in order to show conclusively whether the story is or is not a fabrication.
