WEDNESDAY, November 26, 1913.

Must Pay the Piper.

We have often dwelt on the reckless extravagance of the administration of Sir Edward Morris. We have shown that he led the country astray and into believing that his first loan would pay for the building and entire completion of the Branch Railway Contract of 1910; that he had to eat his own words two years later when he found it necessary to raise a second loan to go on with the work, and that the end is not yet. He has undertaken that the Fortune Bay railway shall traverse the length of the Burin peninsula and terminate at Grand Bank. He has also undertaken to extend the Trepassey branch to St. Mary's. He can neither finish the 1910 contract nor go on with the work outside of the Branch Railway Contracts without raising a third loan. Loans are now difficult to raise. The investing public are fighting shy of investing in Colonial Government loans, even when Four and Four and a half per cent. debentures are offered at a discount. Underwriters are full up with them and have decided not to underwrite any more until they have got off their hands what they have there. The outlook for raising a third loan is black enough from circumstances alone beyond the control of Newfoundland, and black enough even for big and powerful Dominions. But, in the case of Newfoundland, it has been partly made worse by the wanton extravagance of the past four years, and particularly from the way the Civil Service has been swollen during the past two years or more, and the great expenditure made this summer and fall in public works; but more especially has it been made worse by the electioneering budget of last spring, which took off some $380,000 of duties. All kinds of flimsy arguments were advanced to show that the revenue would be sufficiently buoyant to overcome the adverse effects of these reductions and to give a revenue of some Four million dollars by June 30th next. The Government is now putting their fiscal theory to the test, and when the House meets next February, the Minister of Finance will have a chance to show how the facts square with the rosy expectations he laid down and how far the income for the current year will meet the expenditure which has gone on and is going on. The Auditor General's reports to be tabled next session should prove illuminating and should afford many topics for discussions in the House and in the Press. Morris and his colleagues have had their election days, now they have to pay the piper.

High Liner.

The crew of the schooner Tulip, nine men all told, made $252 a man. They fished at Splitting Knife, Labrador, the past summer. Capt. Kean, who was in command of the Tulip, Capt. Kean is a son of Capt. A. Kean and is keeping up the tradition of the Kean family and the Telegram wishes that he may live to do so for many years to come.

The Pantomimes

There was a good attendance at Rossley's last night, notwithstanding the stormy condition of the weather, and all enjoyed the show. Miss Louise Arkandy certainly sang "My Hero" from the Chocolate Soldier, in splendid style. The orchestra was also enjoyed by the music lovers; there is now a piano, first violin, second violin, cornet and drums and they rendered some of the very latest selections. The pantomime rehearsals are proving more successful every day. There will be a great many surprises in those productions; in the first place the costumes are each and every one new, not one of them ever have been seen before; the scenery is new, the electrical effects the very latest and best money and brains can produce for the size of the house, while the fairy play will be refreshing and captivating and positively never attempted here before.

Can't Fall Out.

Simply that and nothing more. The baby can dance—can jump—turn a somersault, but is absolutely safe all the time. Can't fall out. Every woman who has a baby and values its life should have one of these beautiful Baby Beds.

Now on exhibition in window. Worth seeing. Take a good look at it. Walk in and we'll explain.

What Led to the Assault.

A few facts concerning that serious assault committed by Joseph Mignonette, who is now at the Penitentiary awaiting his trial, were learned today, and what led to the assault. A person who was an eye-witness to the whole affair says that he was present when the altercation took place between Brine and Mignonette. The latter was dropping a load of coal near a residence on Pennywell Road. Brine came along with his horse and buggy and was unable to pass by until Mignonette got out of the way. It is alleged Brine asked Mignonette to move out of the way quickly. This request was not granted and we are told, Brine got out of his vehicle and struck Mignonette, making him cry. Brine then went to haul the former's horse out of the way when Mignonette, who was unequal to his assailant in physique and many other respects, rushed to his cart, grabbed the bridle and struck Brine down in the head with it. Our informant tells us that Brine struck first and gave provocation.

A Challenge.

FERRO SPEAKS.

Dear Sir,—As we notice that Two of our would-be competitors are offering each other challenges, containing all kinds of stipulations and conditions.

BE IT KNOWN THAT FERRO ENGINES WILL CHALLENGE ANY OTHER MAKE OF ENGINE at present in Newfoundland of same weight and price for a race anywhere and WILL GIVE ANY OTHER ENGINE a start of one mile in Ten.

And further, we will pay any start our competitors like to put up to any public charity to be named.

Two races to be held and we have no objection to boats changing engines in second race, any type of fishing boat and not only to Cape Spear but around the Island, if necessary.

We make this offer, knowing that we have Three times as many engines running here than any other make, and that they are the fastest engines in Newfoundland to-day.

Neatness.

Jim Griggins the grocer's a seedy old jay, whiskers are ragged, his hair all astray; his hands are begrimed when he weighs out your squash, his garments suggest that they're fit for the wash. And Griggins keeps saying, when people will list: "The country is going to blitzen, I wist! My trade's growing duller—I can't make it thrive—I haven't one patron where once I had five!" But Griggins, the grocer, just over the way, is selling his prunes and his Young Hyson hay; he always seems busy, he takes in the scads, the roughs, the chins, the dust of our daddies. But Griggins is always in hatty array, his whiskers are combed in the Ham Lewis way, his bald spot is washed till it mirrorlike gleams; his shirt has no butter or lard on its seams, his trousers are creased and don't bag at the knees, his shoes aren't potted with Limburger cheese. And all through his store things are nifty and clean, from the codfish and soap to the shredded sardine. So people parade to his place by the store, while Griggins is grousing around his store.
