Food Hoarding.

Perhaps no greater offence can be committed by a community, as well as by an individual, against the well being of the nations in war time than that of food hoarding. People guilty of this, apparently do not realize it has no seriousness, nor the effect it has on the laws of supply and demand. There might also be added the knifed crime of profiteering, which in the United States is made an offence against the realm and punished by fines, the sum of which is turned over to one of the many war funds instituted in that country. But the hoarding of food contrary to the regulations of the Controlling Board constitutes a far greater menace, perhaps, than profiteering, though they both bear equally harsh on the consuming purchaser. All the food producing countries, which are at war are hard put to it to supply their soldiers, the needs of home consumption and the requirements of foreign trade, and naturally something had to be done to curtail waste and minimise extravagance. The fighting man in the field is the chief consideration. He must be fed. Next in order comes the war worker, whose name is legion, and who, in order to turn out a countless flow of supplies and munitions, must be as well fed as the soldier's abroad. The navy and the merchant marine have to be looked after, then the home population. All these are non-producers of food, yet they have to be fed. Upon the farmer all the great tasks of raising wheat and cattle must be laid, and that they may not fail, the State decrees that help shall be afforded him. The man behind the plow is as necessary to victory as the man behind the gun, and to ensure that victory there must be no diminution in the supplies which are needed by Armies, Navies and Merchant Shipping. These cannot wait. Whatever is required must be ready when the requisitions for stores come in. A continuous supply must be ever in transit, and no delay must ensue. "If an army," to use a Napoleonic axiom, "lights upon its stomach," and that is as true to-day as it was when uttered, there is all the more need for the commissariat department to have at command everything essential, and with that in view and seeing its absolute imperativeness allied regulations have been issued certain regulations for the better conservation of food. These regulations decree that certain quantities only may be bought within a given time; they also set forth that certain quantities only may be exported to countries which hitherto had carte blanche in their orders. It is in consequence of this that Newfoundland has been cut down in her food purchases abroad. It is for this reason that our people have been asked to conserve and save. Carefulness in the use of food will be one of the great factors in bringing victory to the Allied arms, and Newfoundlanders above all others, should appreciate this. We are utterly dependent on outside help for everything we eat, and if we show ourselves extravagant in the use of imported foodstuffs, or negligent in our recognition of the circumstances surrounding the conditions under which we receive our allotments, our source of supply will be removed. So long as we are careful and provident, there will be ample for our needs, and there is no earthly necessity for hoarding. Nothing could be more selfish; nothing is more unpatriotic. The food hoarder is helping the enemy, though maybe he does not realize it. And he is not only rendering the foe assistance, but what is more, if anything could be worse, he is depriving his fellowman of his proportionate share of the necessities of life, and this has a tendency to weaken the resisting powers of the population, a weakness which may end disastrously. We trust that it will not become the duty of the Food Control Board to invoke the aid of the law to prevent any recurrence of this offence of hoarding food. The good sense of our people should be a guarantee that the regulations now in force will be carried out. But if a repetition of this matter occurs in any larger measure, the Control Board will be perfectly justified in penalizing the offenders. Fair play to two hundred and ten thousand people in the outports will demand that this be done.

Here Are The Facts.

The Military Service Board has had under consideration an alleged breach of the Military Service Act referred to in an article which was published in the Evening Herald of Tuesday, July 23rd, headed "Priest's Story."
This matter has been in the hands of the Police for some time for the purposes of investigation and the Board is now advised that no breach of the Military Service Act has occurred, but as so much publicity has been given, the facts as they now appear are as follows:
Some time during the month of May last Mrs. Matthew Quigley, of Torbay, applied to the Rev. John Ashley, Parish Priest at that place, for the Baptismal Certificate of her son Michael, who was then and is still residing in the United States. Fr. Ashley states she told him that her son was 19 years old and that she wanted a certificate for Torbay, he might apply for exemption from military service, or as she put it, "to get him clear of the service." Fr. Ashley, for the year 1899 and found a Baptismal entry which was shown to Mrs. Quigley, which she stated to refer to her son. Accordingly he gave her the usual Baptismal Certificate. She took the Certificate to the Registrar and subsequently brought it back to Fr. Ashley enclosed in a letter from Hon. M. P. Gibbs, of which the following is a copy:
St. John's, May 23, 1918.
The enclosed Certificate shows Quigley to be but 19 years of age. Quigley's mother claims he will be 24 next September. The Certificate is required by Quigley, who is now in the United States, for the purpose of exemption from "draft" to be made in Aug. I will certify your signature.
Yours truly,
G. M. P. GIBBS.

Mrs. Quigley states that when she brought the '19 year' certificate to Mr. Gibbs she told him that Michael was 23, which she returned to Fr. Ashley she asked him to certify to 24. Fr. Ashley very positively refused and on the following Sunday morning gave her the correct certificate showing Michael Quigley to have been born at Middle Cove on the 14th September, 1899. This was taken to Mr. Gibbs and Fr. Ashley's signature was certified by him as a Notary and sent by Mrs. Quigley to her son in the United States. It appears that the first certificate referred to by Michael Quigley, but to the son of another family of the name of Quigley. Mrs. Quigley has two other sons, one aged 17 living in Torbay, and one aged 32 living in the United States.
The Board is of opinion that the facts are substantially as above stated, and being so to consider that any action on their part is called for.

New Moons and N. E. Winds.

Local meteorologists and the weather prophets who are learned in lunar love say that the prevailing winds for 1918 will be N.E. So far they are correct. They base their predictions on the time of the new moon, asserting that whenever the phase occurs in the a.m., the wind for the full moon period will be mainly from the N.E. Reference to the calendar will show that the phases of the moon occur in January, February, April, June and July have been in the morning. The phase to come for August, September, October and November will also occur after midnight, so that a continuance of N. E. winds may be expected for the balance of the year.

Our Baseball Column.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

TO-NIGHT'S THE NIGHT.
To-night's Baseball game should prove to be what is generally known as a "blood" match. The Wanderers are smarting over the drubbing administered to them by the Cubs last week in the Mount Cashel series, while the Cubs on their part are not inclined to apply any balm to their opponents' sores. This contest will open the second round of the League series. The Wanderers will be strengthened by the addition of Ford who will play third base, while Drover will also be in evidence. It is therefore not unlikely that the Cubs will find they are up against it hard when Freddie calls "Play Ball." Here are the doughty warriors:

CONDITIONS UNFAVORABLE IN FLANDERS.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 28. (By the A.P.)
Continued rain has turned the Flanders front in many places into an impassable mire, while other parts of the front are wet and soggy. Such conditions are most unfavorable for launching an assault against the British lines, even if the enemy, who is busy trying to save his troops porters of the Marne from further defeat, should have some such plan in mind. Large quantities of gas have been produced in many places into an impassable mire, while other parts of the front are wet and soggy. Such conditions are most unfavorable for launching an assault against the British lines, even if the enemy, who is busy trying to save his troops porters of the Marne from further defeat, should have some such plan in mind. HARDEN'S VIEWS.

AMSTERDAM, July 28.
Maximilian Harden devotes practically the whole of to-day's Die Zukunft to proving that Chancellor Von Hertling's charge against the Allies that they want to annihilate Germany is untrue. Harden quotes President Wilson's Munich speech, and shows how bitter the Entente nations are against militarism, but that they are ready to give the German people a chance. He compares these speeches with those recently delivered either by the German Chancellor or various Junkers in the Prussian Upper House, where the demand for unlimited annexations is continually heard. He concludes his remarks by urging the Allies to begin to set clearly on which side is the will to annexations. Germany
