"Seven Chances"
Has 700 BridesBUSTER KEATON JUST CAN'T SAY
"NO" IN LATEST COMEDY.

When it comes to money and marriage in "Seven Chances," his latest Metro-Goldwyn comedy, coming today to the Nickel Theatre, Buster Keaton just can't say "no."

Buster starts out as a millionaire but, being of a most religious turn of mind, he sells all he has and gives the proceeds to the poor. Meanwhile some 700 women in bridal regalia answer his newspaper advertisement for a wife, believing him to have $7,000,000. And there the fun begins.

David Belasco considers "Seven Chances" the funniest stage comedy of recent years. And Buster Keaton has "gargled it up" until his film version is declared to be seven times as funny as the stage comedy was. Joseph M. Schenck purchased "Seven Chances" from David Belasco and released it through Metro-Goldwyn Pictures.

Buster's new leading woman in "Seven Chances" is Ruth Dwyer, who has just finished the lead in "White Fang." Miss Dwyer is the third leading woman Buster has had in the past year. Natalie Palmdade, Keaton's wife, and Kathryn McGuire having played opposite to him in his previous comedies.

Buster also is supported by T. Roy Barnes, star of many Hollywood comedies and New York musical comedy successes; as well as by Snitz Edwards and Jules Cowles and a boy, at seventeen beautiful "baby" stars. "The Man on the Box" will be shown as an extra feature at the big Saturday matinee.

Evidently a Bargain

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, replying to questioners in the house of Commons said that if Great Britain's debt to the United States had been funded on the same terms as Italy's, the amount which the British Government would pay to the United States Government during the present year would be approximately $11,000,000 instead of $160,000,000.
