the journal boxes have been stolen from Grand Trunk freight cars in the Point St. Charles yard. They are worth $2 each, and taking into consideration the loss of the use of the cars and the labor of refitting, the loss to the company will be at least $1,000. Two of the stolen brasses have been found in a junk shop in St. Henri.

SPRAYING FRUIT TREES.

Interesting Report by the Provincial Instructor in Fruit Spraying Extracts From the Actual Results Obtained.

Mr. W. M. Orr, of Fruitlands, near Stoney Creek, provincial instructor in fruit spraying, has just handed in to the Department of Agriculture his report for the past season. The report is extremely interesting and contains useful information gathered from all a larger crop, but is also a sure means of obtaining a finer quality. of Agriculture instituted a popular move and conferred a great boon on the province when it began two years ago to give practical demonstration and instruction in this useful method of preserving fruit trees. The report is all the more interesting because it contains the actual results from all the orchards where experiments were made, and comparisons are made of other years, when spraying was not in vogue. The following are extracts from some of the results, picked at random from the large number in the report: In Capt. Henderson's orchard at Burlington the fruit on the sprayed trees was free from worm and of fine quality, while that on the unsprayed trees was wormy and droppy. Mr. Mund, of Drumbo, had excelent results. The Northern Spy trees which were sprayed bore 40 per cent more fruit than those which were not sprayed, and the apples were much larger and cleaner; but it was in snow apples where he reaped the most bene-For the last six years his snows have been very badly damaged by what is known as the black scab, but this year the trees which were spray-ed yielded 95 per cent of clean, marketable fruit, while those trees which had not been treated only gave 4 per cent. Mr. J. M. Robertson, of Galt, is another who benefited largely by this new system. By actual count his "snows" that were treated produced not treated only 10 per cent.

Mr. Frank Hillock, of Prampton, is a convert and enthusiastic advocate spraying. For the past six years his snows have been worthless for packing, but this year the trees sprayed gave a good crop of perfectly clean

The solution used is a mixture of paris green and sulphate of copper, and in a large orchard the cost for each tree would not exceed five cents. In a small orchard the cost, of course would be a little more but in every case the cost, according to the results obtained this year, would be a mera bagatelle compared with the great benefit to be derived from a systematic application of the solution.

Warning to Those Who Handle Bank Bills.

Blood-Poisoning Induced by the Habit of Licking the Finger When Counting.

Alexander Waitzfelder, a sporting man, who was for years well known to frequenters of all the local race tracks under the pseudonym of Sheeny Dan, died on New Year's Day of blood poisoning, which is directly traceable to his method of handling bank notes paid in to Bookmaker Peter Downey, of University Place, for whom he was cashier for the last few years. He was a rapid counter and handled a great many bills which had passed through hands that were not overclean. To facilitate the rapid counting of these bills, it was his habit to moisten his middle finger with his lips so that he might the more readily separate the bills. The finger became isoned last summer, while felder was employed on the Morris Park track, and the poison communicated to his under lip, which swelled to an enormous size. The danger of thus carelessly handling worn bank bills had often been noted in newspapers, but Waitzfelder had never given the matter a thought, and he did not know what the real trouble

His friends induced him to go to Dr. Irving, a physician widely known in the sporting fraternity, and the doctor the finger and the poisoned lip. weeks ago Sheeny Dan struck his knee joint, bruising it severely, and inflammation set in almost at once. Waitzfelder was forced to limp around painfully with a cane. He thought he merely had an attack of rheumatism kicked him on the arm, breaking it in limb. Gangrene appeared in the injured limb, and on Christmas Messrs. A. C. Wood and James his brothers Sol and Edward and his Fisher, formerly of the Stratford Bea- wife induced him to go to the Presbyterian Hospital for treatment. Poison had become seated in his system, however, and despite all the surgeons could do to arrest it, the pa-tient died. He was buried on Sunday from his brother's home at No. East Fifty-fifth street. Waltzfelder was 38 years old and of athletic build. He first became known in the sporting circles of the Tenderloin as one of the aids of Mike Murray, when the latter's establishments were open business.
