obtained, it was found that the two men wanted immediate payment of $640. Failing payment, they intimated there would be no opera that evening for Caruso, and that he would have to pass the night in a less comfortable residence than the hotel. The claim, it appeared on investigation, was for the income tax due in 1902, and the tenor, who does not read English well, had not understood the purport of the occasional applications sent him from the inland revenue office.
