Severe Winter Followed By Late Spring Predicted

Herbert J. Browne, Widely Known American Ocean Meteorologist, Declares Record-Breaking Cold in Many Sections of Continent Points to Abnormal Conditions.

Associated Press Despatch.
Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—A severe winter for the American continent with heavy snowfall and long, continuing cold waves, broken by warm periods of brief duration, is predicted by Herbert J. Browne, widely known ocean meteorologist. An abnormal condition, he holds, is pointed to by many factors, including the record-breaking cold in many sections of the continent this fall, beginning with the first snows in the northwest on Sept. 18, four days before the official close of summer. The winter, he believes, will be followed by a late spring. Primarily the predictions are based on a study of ocean surface temperatures as determined by the amount of sun's heat reaching the earth. This solar radiation for more than three years has been below normal. The present weather situation, he says, indicates that the world is facing a condition which will interfere seriously with crops, the cold fall and winter in prospect being but forerunners of the next two years. A serious situation developing in the southern hemisphere in the crop year of 1926 to 1927 and in the northern hemisphere in 1927 is predicted. All factors, of which the condition of the sun is the most important, Mr. Browne says, support his view. The sun, which is described by the Smithsonian institute and others as a variable star, is for some unknown reason in a period of low activity with decreased radiation.
