How have, with noble enterprise, provided themselves with pure water, and in doing so took a material step in securing the first sanitary measure, of real importance, effected in our midst. When our water works were completed it was contemplated to carry out a system of drainage as a necessary and desirable sequence. The Poolem have devoted from a former resident a sixteen-page journal called "Poulty in California," published monthly at Los Angelos, Cal., and exclusively de taken in the matter, it has, in our opinion, and in that of most of our townsmen, become a necessity to carry the good work forward as rapidly as possible. The preforward as rapidly as possible. The present condition of Court Street, and several others, demand immediate action in the premises. All cesspools on private grounds should have the requisite conduit facilities for the transmission of all sewerage to the river, and not be left to fester and breed epidemics in our midst. The public should provide these main drains, and people should be compelled, by law, to supply the means to send all cess maitters from their to send all cess maitters from their to send all cess maitters from their to send a large whale, assuming a threatening attitude, in such close proximity, as to cause a change of mind, and instead of pulling further away, they rowed toward the shore, closely followed by the whale. It is needless to add make the requisite conduit facilities whale. The public should been reached, at one time coming to the surface so close as to admit of being hit with a short oar. It is needless to add the conduction in the premises. All cesspools on private grounds instead of pulling further away, they rowed to Mr. J. Let our people then provide the onable cost, for they will be amply repaid by diminished doctors' bills, and the enjoyment of that greatest God to his human creature-sound health. These remarks will be read by many hundreds of people to whom we supply a journal that has always sought to inculcate love of country and the highest weal of the state, and they are designed as a call to right thinking men of all parties to unite in stamping out so vile an enemy—one that may, if not checked, overwhelm the land with infamy and ruin.

It is well known that the Dominion and local laws which have been enacted for its prevention and punishment, have proved largely ineffective, and the hallot, which it was believed by some would kill it outright, has not proved as effective as was expected, though we cannot deny but that it has had a measurably good effect in that direction. It would be next to impossible to eradicate the evil even by the most repressive and severe laws, and it seems to us that nothing short of a strong public opinion, founded on an educated sense of the examination.

The ties are not riven—the theory of the may see the thing for 1889 be created, as the same is included in the count of Michael McMillain in the Presentment for 1889 be created, as the same is included in the cased, as the same is included in the count of Michael McMillain in the Presentment for 1889 be created, as the same is included in the cased, as the same is included in the cased in the part of the cased of the cased of the cased of the cased of the same and in the part of the cased of th that nothing short of a strong public opinion, founded on an educated sense of the sin and danger which threaten the stability of our institutions, will prove completely efficacious in rooting out this growing evil. Every briber and briber in the meanitime should be disfranchised, on the offence being brought home to them, and by statimes brought from holding any commission under the crown. In view of the approaching elections we call upon the candidates throughout this province to set their faces against this vile practice, and to discourage their supporters from resorting to to ton their behalf; and we call earnestly upon the voters, on whom the vile attempt to bribe has been made, to act like wise men and law abiding citizens, to expose the
