WITH the same breath we are called upon to mourn the death of a younger pastor of our church. While still in the prime of his usefulness, the Lord of the harvest has called to his home the Rev. S. Rosborough, of Sheet Harbor. Just 10 years ago our College gave him to that field, and to-day it mourns the loss of an excellent student, preacher and faithful pastor. We extend our sympathy to the congregation and also to the family of the deceased.

COLLEGE NOTES.

THE Arm has frozen over at last, and now our students will not have to make such demands upon the rink. Several sets of band tickets will probably be exposed for sale at less than cut prices—apply to Rooms, Nos. 6, 14: others to follow.

WE did not think when making reference to our young friend Homer Putnam in our last issue, that we would be called upon so soon again to mention his name. Now this sounds like a continued story, and this the second chapter contains the record of an interesting event. We scarcely need to name it. Congratulations, brother.

SINCE our reunion after holidays we have been unusually buried in our note and text-books. The Midsessional Exams. were upon us, and despite our honest efforts day by day we felt as the time approached that an extra effort was necessary. But we are now on the home stretch and if we do as well in April as we have just done, our hopes are somewhat bright as to the result. We trust no one has made shipwreck, and should there be any to whom the Professor has given a gentle hint we know there is ample time and opportunity to retrieve shattered fortunes.

WE much regret the absence of our genial waiter, Joe. Last week illness claimed him as its subject with so tight a grip that it was found necessary to remove him to the Hospital. We are
