THE CIVIL SERVANT AND THE STATE

An address by Mr. L.B. Pearson, Secretary of State for External Affairs, before the Professional Institute of the Civil Service of Canada, in Ottawa, on March 25, 1950.

I have had some difficulty in thinking of a subject hich would fit this occasion. I recall that last year my beputy addressed you in what I thought was a very interesting and hought-provoking speech - on the position of the civil servant n relation to--shall I say?--the political servant. Having exerienced both roles myself, that of the bureaucrat and the politiian, I am tempted to talk about the reverse relationship of the olitical to the official side of government. I will, however, resist that temptation because I wish to discuss with you another ut related problem which is of grave concern to us all - that is, he effect on the relationship between the civil servant and his mployer, the government, of the concerted Communist attack which is today being made upon the free world.

This whole question - which tends to dominate so much of ur life today - is of particular concern to the teacher, the tudent, the researcher, the government employee; to people who an only work effectively in that atmosphere of free enquiry, which is the very life blood of achievement.

We live in difficult and trying times, of serious problems, ndividual and collective, national and international. Certainly ne of the most worrying of these is the reconciliation of individual reedom and group security. This problem becomes more important nd more difficult as we become increasingly conscious of the threat o our free society - and to our individual liberty - of communism s the instrument of Soviet imperialism. If the communist system ver triumphed here, it would of course, destroy most of the things hat make society of any value to the individual. This, as a omestic problem is serious enough and involves perplexing problems or government and for the individual.

So - even as an exclusively domestic issue - the struggle gainst communism would be serious enough; just about the most erious issue of the day. But the situation becomes infinitely. ore dangerous when we know, as we do know, that those who lead he communist forces in our country - and in other countries - are ot inspired by feelings of patriotism for a national cause - howver wrong and misguided - but are the agents - open and unabashed f a foreign imperialism, masquerading under the guise of interational communism. Canada, to these men, means nothing except s a satellite state of a communist Russia, the leaders of which re now merely Russian despots, using new methods to spread Slav

Those, therefore, who follow communism in this country re not only propagating a reactionary economic and social docrine, but are, as well, the agents of an alien aggressive ^{aperialism}. This we must never forget, though every effort
