

In Search of Arcady

BY

NINA WILCOX
PUTNAM

FROM the moment of the arrival of Cecil Fitz-Williams, Earl of Chamboyne, in America, the best-laid plans for the capture of an American heiress seem to go persistently awry.

It is in the open country of New England that a very romantic little tale unravels itself, for the young Scotchman quite loses his heart to Lolli Plashta, ostensibly a gypsy and the proprietress of the quaintest little traveling cart that dispenses millinery and notions to the New England countryside.

How the Earl, in quest of Arcady, becomes an itinerant vendor of summer cottage furniture; how the search leads him into the picturesque gypsy camps; and how he rescues Lolli Plashta from violence at the hands of the gypsies make a very enjoyable story.

Illustrated

Fixed Price, $1.20

(Postage 12c.)

Doubleday, Page & Co.