As It Should Be

The sentimental and morai rgument for the removal of the saloon is more powerful with the average voter in the "wet and dry" campaigns than the economic one, strong as it is.

The Bar-room Must Go

The ilquor men have untold wealth at their disposal; the ablest minds in the netion are employed as their attorneys. They have lobbyists at the eessione of every State Legislature and National Congress; they have politiciane of hoth parties in every State and city who can be relied upon to promote their interests.

They have an army of 200,000 saioon-keepers, and more than that of loyal patrons; millions of dollars are epent in advertisements and in their literary department each year; and their fight will be desperate and prolonged.

But the self-interest and conscience of the nation are agr'nst them, and unless there ehall be some reformation in the liquor traffic, which seems now impossible, or if there ehould occur no disagreement or disintegration among the temperance forces now so united, it is likely that within a generation the saloon, as we see it to-day, will have passed away.

Prohibition. in Other Countries

The Tweifth Internetional Congrees ageinst aicoholism held this year in London, England, was in itself a demonstration of the world-wide interest in the temperance cause, and the reporte presented and statemente made, gave evidence of the almoet universal growth of sentiment in favor of the suppression of the liquor traffic by law. Omitting in this article references to Canada end the United States, we clip from reporte of the Congress and other Associated Prohibition Press recorde the following items, showing eomething of the progress mede in other lends.

Germany

As a result of the earnest and eelf-sacrificing efforts of eminent German scientists, who have sounded wide the elarm nt the rising tide of intemperance in Germany, a powerful total abstinence movement is developing by leeps and bounde. In 1903, according to the best authorities in Germeny, there were 35,000 memhers of the varioue temperance societies in Germany. This membership has increased to 55,000 in 1905, and according to the "Internationele Monatsscrift," December, 1908, there were 86,000 memhers in these same organizations at that date. In addition to this, there are thousands of boys and girls enlisted in juvenile Temperance Societies.

Germany ie just now the scene of a novel defensive campaign, which is being carried on by the Berlin Acoclation of Wine Merchants. On the tablee of fashionable restaurents and cafes throughout Berlin, foldere are making their appearance hearing the hoid-face legend, "Wine is heeith," and advoceting its use.

France

The terribic prevalence of intemperance among the masses of the French people, especially in wine-making districte, has aroused some of the ahlest scientists and public men to energetic espoueal of the temperance movement.

The latest development is a strong and aggressive anti-alcohol group in the chamber of Deputies. M. Joseph Reinach ie the leader of this eection of the French Parliament, and in a ringing speech, recently delivered in the chamber, urged the abolition of the whole absinthe industry, even going so far ae to declare that France could easily afford to indennify the manufecturers of that poisonous beverage in order to rid the nation of the curse.

Temperance instruction is now a prominent feature of the French Educational system.

is so the iedge

iminemitatea te of cying that very and refui cause uries man ts to d in etay

iness ands hose

illion 108,ecesotest vaste the has e in illars for the

, re-

ined

paid nunie no weil nity, le of e heit to ce of get-

each

n is

g to