ECHOES OF THE CONGRESS.

Umbrella Col. W. N. Ponton, one of the Belleville delegates to the recent Chambers of Commerce, has contributed an excellent and timely article on the Con-You have asked me to write a few lines on the recent gathering of representatives from all points of the Brit-

order to crystalize into the form of resolutions and recommendations the united opinion and sentiments of those who are endeavoring to serve the empire by

On the first day there were occas-ional remarks about possible dissolu-tion of the empire into its original component parts—the isolated atoms component parts-the isolated atoms to which Mr. Chamberlain speaks-in the event of an inter-preferential tariff not being adopted, but on the last day no such suggestion or words were heard, for all had made up their minds that in dark days as in bright days with summer skies on summer days, with summer skies on summer days, with summer skies on summer seas, or in times of storm and distress, all the colonies and dependencies would remain faithful and united, and that patriotism and pride of race had something in them beyond the mere

At the same time all admitted that the time for groping had gone past, that progress must now be made, that light must be sought, and that if any advantage could be given by the one to the other, that advantage should be accorded, that we must be drawn closer together, with a firm and in-dependent front shown to the rest of the world. It has been said that the Englishman sometimes is phlegmatic, the Scotch-man sometimes dour, and the Irish-man excitable. We did not find these characteristics developed abnormally. We found the citizens of Great Britaan to be citizens of the world in the theorem and a more hearty. Britain to be citizens of the world in the true sense, and a more hearty, genial, eager, earnest, alert and level-headed gathering of gentlemen never, I believe, met together, all animated with one idea ,all possessing ideals, but all molded in the practical mat-rix of a life experience, "ALL FOR EACH AND EACH FOR ALL." is the summing up of what is desired to be attained, but to attain this, some rel-fish interests must be subordinated, some provincial sensitiveness must be kept in check, and some Bourassaism suppressed. —

This, the fifth Congress, was the first ever held out of the Home Land, and the experiment has passed into a suc-cessful experience. Successful, not mere-ly on account of the thoughtful and thought-producing speeches made; suc-cessful experience. Successful because be-fore the close we Canadians realized more than ever the great imperial her-tage which it is our privilege and duty to maintain, and we also realized that, while we will be potent factors in that empire's future, yet we are not the only colony or integral portion of the British empire on which the sun shines. Our visiting delegates, our compat-riots from centre to circumference of the great national_circle, have also realized the potentialities of the futue which we have in store in this broad Dominion, if Canada is developed by British population, by British capital and under kindred British laws.
