A First Inning Attempt.

Marry got into trouble in the first fnning. Owens slammed the first ball pitched for two bases, and Wenger sacrificed him to third. Byrne flew out to Mitchell, and then Owens tried to score on the squeeze play. Whaley failing to connect with a wild ball, which Matteson dropped, and, although Owens appeared safe, Strowger called him out. The locals also got to third in the second inning, Whaley walking and stealing second, and Briger sacrificing him, but Marry simply tightened up and he got no farther.

A Hitless Period.

The locals didn't get anything that looked like a hit from the first until the seventh. In this inning Byrne singled to start things, and Whaley sacrificed him. Then Marry walked Briger purposely to get at Shaw, but he couldn't get them over and Shaw also walked, filling the bases. Friedman then singled through short, scoring Byrne.
