

A TRIP THROUGH THE REFINERY

Some Impressions of The Big Sugar Plant

VALUABLE ASSET FOR CITY

Plant Now Employs 400 Men and Furnishes Work For Many Others—Cleanliness and Purity The Motto of The Progress—How Sugar Made

The size of the plant, its absolute completeness, the organization of both men and machinery to produce the greatest results with the least waste of energy, the spotlessness of the premises, and the great care taken to ensure the purity of the product were some of the chief impressions left after a visit to the Atlantic Sugar Refinery this morning.

It would be hard for anyone who has not seen the refinery from the inside to realize what this big industry means for St. John. The construction of the plant to begin with left an immense amount of money in the city, and today they are giving steady employment in the plant to four hundred men. In addition to this they are furnishing extra employment to large numbers of other men handling their inward cargoes of raw material, and helping with the transportation of the finished product.

St. John will profit not only by the direct financial benefit of such an industry, but also from the publicity which the city will receive from their advertising campaign, which is now in full swing from Halifax to Alberta.

Standing at the portals of the harbor it is a business monument which cannot fail to impress every visitor to this city.

Since the plant has progressed towards completion, visitors have been excluded, not only because of the necessity of safeguarding valuable equipment and trade processes, but also to prevent accidents to persons not acquainted with the premises.

Lewis J. Seidensticker, the manager of the plant, speaking of this today explained the necessity of this, while expressing his regret that the nature of their business made it impossible for them to throw open their doors to their patrons and the public generally.

It was as the representative of the public that the wished newspaper representatives to see the plant that they might give their readers their impressions of the place.

It is the company's loss that they cannot throw open their doors, for no one can pass through the plant without being coming an enthusiast on the subject of "Lantic" sugar.

The main idea of the process seems simple, but the size of the plant is an indication not only of its capacity, but of the immense amount of machinery and apparatus required to convert the raw sugar into the table article, according to the high standard which the company has set for itself.

Starting at their own wharf, where the sixth cargo of sugar is now being discharged, the barges delivered at the company at their scales inside the warehouse doors. Here the sugar is weighed, then stacked roof-high by means of traveling car lifts. As it is required it is dumped in the capacious main of the big machine which starts it on the way towards refining.

The melt house, the melting house, the building of four stories adjoins the warehouse, and in this building the sugar is turned into a heavy liquid. From this building it is pumped to the top of the ten-story structure, one-half of which is devoted to the char process of purification.

By the way, it was the large quantity of this char which was brought into the city last fall, which was mistaken by some persons for gun powder, and the char house, which is so full of a black dust as to mean the ruin of any clothes but overalls, is the part of the building which other persons have regarded with suspicion because they are not allowed to enter it.

After the char process, the syrup starts at the top of the other half of the ten-story building and works downward for the refining process. Tremendous copper boilers play an important part in this part of the work.

The grade of sugar, white or yellow, fine or medium granulated, depending on the mixture of the syrup and the boiling process. From this the sugar is passed to other machines, where the water is extracted by centrifugal process, and then winnowed for further drying. The fine sugar then passes through the granulating machine, and is ready for packing.

That is, if it is up to the standard, the sugar must be perfect, or it cannot leave the building. The slightest defect, even an occasional speck, means that the whole batch has to be turned back, to go through the whole process again.

From the time it starts to the time it is shipped, the sugar is not touched by human hands. Even the weighing and packing is done by automatic machinery. The greatest precautions are taken to keep it absolutely clean, and the finishing touch of it is found in the lining of the freight cars with paper to prevent any contamination during shipment.

Space does not suffice to describe the operation plant, the great boiler house,
