TWO SHOT IN FIGHT WITH SILENT THIEVES

Railroad Police Set Trap and Catch Seven Men—One on Each Side Wounded.

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 26.—Seven men are under arrest here, charged with robbing a Pennsylvania freight train, following a pistol fight on the tracks of the main line, near Metuchen, in which five railroad detectives of the Pennsylvania system got the better of the robbers.

One of the detectives, Patrick Dalloran, of Jersey City, is in Mullenberg Hospital, Plainfield, with a bullet wound in his abdomen, and one of the robbers, Conrad Albert, also of Jersey City, is in the county jail here, with a severe leg wound.

Frequent robberies of freight trains caused the railroad police to set a trap near Metuchen. The detectives, in hiding, saw a freight slow up and stop near an automobile truck, running along with the train, stopped at the crossing and two men jumped out and started toward the train at the point where several men began to throw out bales of silk.

The railroad detectives opened fire on the robbers, who returned the shots. After a momentary stand the robbers fled, with the detectives in pursuit. Albert, whose leg wound prevented his escape, and Ramon Rindal were overtaken and arrested. Five men were arrested in Jersey City—William McQuillen, Martin Cavanaugh, Martin McMahon, William Alton and P. H. Kegan—and brought here to face the charge of train robbery.

It is believed that the robbers about the freight jumped after the train had left the Jersey City yards. Signals were set against the train at the point where the silk was thrown out, but whether that was done by the robbers has not been learned.

BISHOP SAYS HIS LIFE THREATENED

Several Priests Also, Writes Most Rev. T. O'Dea

Letter to Sir Hamar Greenwood Says Government Outrages in Ireland Greater Than Those of Other Side.

London, Nov. 26.—Denunciation of "horrible government outrages to which the people of Ireland, are subjected" is voiced in a long letter written to Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, by the Most Rev. Thomas O'Dea Bishop of the United Diocese of Galway and Kilmacudagh.

The bishop warns Sir Hamar that his own life and those of other clergymen have been threatened and that the Irish executive is responsible for their safety.

"Governance outrages," the bishop declares, "have been incomparably greater in volume than those on the other side. The murder of Father Griffin of Grammore was due to government forces, and mark a new departure in the campaign, which apparently indicates the beginning of an attack upon Catholics and religion."

When the bishop returned from the funeral of Father Griffin he asserts he found at his home a letter addressed to himself and bearing a Galway postmark. The letter read: "If any members of His Majesty's forces are interfered with in Galway, you will meet Griffin's fate."

Bishop O'Dea adds that Father A. J. Conidine, Father John W. O'Meehan and Father John W. Cunnane, priests in his diocese, have been threatened with death, and that Father Cunnane's house has already been fired upon.
