

At last the masculine ankle is to come into its own. Some American cutters have invented this freakish fashion, which looks like a Mexican bandit's costume in comic opera, and some Americans are said to be actually wearing it.

ENJOY LIVING?

You can't if ambition is lacking. If your appetite is poor, your sleep restless, and your digestion impaired through worry and overwork, your system needs a gentle tonic stimulant to bring back the glow of health to those pallid cheeks.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has enabled thousands to enjoy perfect health and thereby get the most out of life. It imparts new energy because it stimulates one of the most important organs of the body—the stomach—to healthy action, and through this renewed activity supplies red, rich blood to the heart, strengthening the nerves, giving you that sense of well-being which attends perfect health. It makes the old feel young and the young strong and vigorous.

Buy a bottle today and you'll begin to feel better right away. Sold in sealed bottles only by most druggists, dealers and hotels everywhere.

BRITISH COLUMBIAN WRITER'S SUCCESS

Miss Constance Skinner Wins Prize For Song in Bookman Competition—Author Well Known Here

(Victoria Colonist)

In the prize competition for the best lyric offered by The London Bookman, the first prize has been increased and divided between two competitors, Miss Constance Lindsay Skinner, a Canadian writer of plays, short stories and poems, receives half the prize awarded by Sir William Robertson Nicoll, LL. D., editor-in-chief of The Bookman publications for her song, "Song of Cradle-Making," and honorable mention for her "Song Primitive." The former, or prize poem, is published in the August number of The Bookman, just issued.

The songs are in the barbic or folksong manner, the "Song of Cradle-Making" being the utterance of an Indian mother on the British Columbia Coast as she weaves the cradle for the child that is coming.

"Song Primitive" is a hymn to the dawn by the wanderer in the outdoors. Some may see a touch of hercidity in this, as the Lindsay clan have in all generations contributed to Scotland's folk-songs. Lady Ann Lindsay, a great aunt of Constance Skinner, wrote the well-known ballad, "Auld Robin Gray." Another circumstance of interest is that Charles Reade, the famous novelist, who was one of the founders of The Bookman in London, or at least was identified with the parent publication early in its career, was a cousin of Constance Skinner's father.

It is often said that it is very difficult for artists of the new world to obtain recognition abroad. It is rather interesting, in consequence, to note that this is not the first time a degree of recognition has been accorded to Constance Skinner. When musical critic on a paper in Los Angeles, California, her descriptive analysis of the symbolism of "Parafal" was translated by the editor of the principal musical periodical in Berlin and printed in his publication with high praise.

Miss Skinner's novelette, "Builder of Men," which appeared first in an American magazine, has been translated into German by a German novelist and issued in Berlin.

Her short story, "Give Hand and Follow," in August Ainslee's has received a good deal of attention from the American and Canadian press for the novelty of its theme and the vigor and poetry of its treatment.

Miss Skinner's father was R. J. Skinner, for twenty-two years provincial timber inspector for British Columbia. A lady, Miss Mary Jobe, has been telling the New York papers that she is going to make a very wonderful trip into "the inaccessible wilds of Northern British Columbia." On the strength of this very complimentary thing has been said about her, and her reputation has been swollen to monumental dimensions in advance of her achievement.

This has led Miss Constance Skinner to tell the New York papers that she is going to make a very wonderful trip into "the inaccessible wilds of Northern British Columbia." On the strength of this very complimentary thing has been said about her, and her reputation has been swollen to monumental dimensions in advance of her achievement.

My mother's sister, wife of the captain of a whaling fleet, holds the female record for penetrating the Far North, although she has never published the fact. She spent three years in the Arctic Circle, taking her little girl with her. The natives had seen few white men and no white women. She traveled as far north as several of the male explorers who have missed the Pole. They were walled into the circle one year by the ice at the mouth of the Straits. The third year their ship was swallowed up under the ice, but all on board escaped and, after months of terrible hardship, reached open water and were taken aboard another whaler.

Somewhere in that white waste of Eskimo land is the beautiful daughter of a titled English family. She gave up the "sword" and her fine talent in music to follow her husband, a young churchman, who felt himself called to the missionary work there. There are other women some delicately nurtured, at this missionary's wife, who have followed their men in exploring, fur trading, missionary work and gold mining all through the country which Miss Jobe will traverse. They have lived there and borne their children there, hundreds of miles from any other "whites," their only neighbors, if they had any, being the simple, kindly natives. Miss Jobe will find her path secure and her welcome warm wherever she meets a human being, which would not be the case if she were "generalized" New York City for the first time.

There is much to do, to enjoy, to learn and to win in the wonderful Far North; but it has not been left for the young femininity of this generation to be "the first" in any part of it. The Intrepid Woman has already written her history there.

Daily Hints For the Cook

Cream Pie
One-half cup sugar, one-quarter tablespoon flour, one tablespoon cornstarch. Mix and all one egg and one yolk (white saved out for frosting) beat well, add one pint of milk and cook in double boiler. When done and partly cool add vanilla or lemon flavor. Cover with meringue and brown in oven.

Macaroni Pudding
Soak six macaronis in half cup of milk (or use the tiny macaronis that may be bought in bulk, and soak about a dozen). Heat a pint of milk in a double boiler, add one beaten egg, two tablespoons cornstarch, pinch of salt and the macaronis. Butter a pudding dish, sprinkle sugar over the bottom and sides, turn in the pudding and sprinkle sugar on top. Cover and set where it will cool gradually. Serve very cold. The sugar will make a sauce, or you may use oranges also when you serve the pudding.

THE SLUMS

Speaking of the inhabitants of the slum, Hollis Godfrey in his "Health of Cities" says:
"Let them escape or not, one and all suffer equally in their lack of resistance to disease. Mal-nutrition, bad air, and overcrowding swell the columns which tell of tuberculosis, pneumonia and every kindred disease. The slum is the great culture medium of civilization, wherein huge cultures of disease are growing, ready when ripe to sweep the city streets."

Last of the Clearance Season Is Here

By J. R. HAMILTON
Former Advertising Manager, Wanamaker's, Philadelphia

WHATEVER YOU want, whatever you are going to want in the future, you can certainly get cheap just now.

Every goods storekeeper is going over his stocks with a fine-toothed comb.

He is looking over his fabrics and saying to his Managers, "How much have you got left of this? How many yards are there of that? Put a price on it. Clear it out. Get the money. Turn it into new goods. Better fifty cents in cash on an old piece of silk than a dollar in stock."

He is going over his lines of suits and dresses, of shoes and hosiery of manly underwear, and he only has one sentence for every buyer. "Put a price on these things. Get them out."

Of course there are some merchants who think that if they just keep on keeping certain stock, it will probably hatch out a lot of little stocks. But most merchants know that the older a thing is, the less saleable it is. And that is why they do not hesitate to cut their prices and to keep on cutting them until all the old goods are gone and the store is ready for its Fall lines.

You have no idea what remarkable bargains you can get right now unless you follow this advertising, carefully day by day. Every issue of this paper brings new surprises. And every ad brings more crowds to the merchants who are really eager to lower their stocks.

Why, you can buy things right now for so much less than at any other time of the year that it seems a shame not to get your share. There is no other way in the world that so much money can be saved.

Try it. Look over the advertising in this paper now. Check off the things you want. Get down early to the stores that are offering these things.

Remember there is no such thing as a complete stock now. You will have to be early to get what you are looking for. For other women are just as eager as you.

Advertising news is certainly most interesting news at a time like this.
