TRY STAR-LIGHT

The Cashier's Horse Trade

By J. W. MILLAR.

At last someone spoke to the Cashier about it. He looked annoyed. "I don't like to bet so much," he admitted, "but I want to see the celebration a success, and they tell me it looks bad if I don't back my own horse. I don't know just what the public demands in such a case, but I have bet more than I can afford to lose. They are giving me big odds, though, and if I win it will be something handsome."

"This was true enough, for they had a matter of nearly two thousand dollars in my hands. However, they were not putting the money up for him to win, and he began to be talked that Evans was trying to induce him to bet, with the idea that he might use some of the bank's money, and maybe ruin the Cashier. "Well, the fourth came, and there was an awful crowd. They had laid out a half-mile track almost in the edge of the town, with a little grandstand and everything all regular. They had the sack race and all such first, then the bucking bronco riding contest, and finally they called the half-mile dash. They had put this last, because, under the circumstances, it was the most interesting event of the day. "Shorty Brant was going to ride for the Cashier. They went over to the little stable he had back of the bank, and led out the horse he met just now. They had a little racing saddle on him, and he looked fit to run for a man's life. Evans set up a roar, but there were plenty of men there who knew the horse—knew the brand, and the scar was there where the sore had been. Yes, it was Ten Spot all right, but slightly changed since he left my stable that day. "Now as those rough and ready races we don't take much account of Jockey Club rules, but most of our folks are square sports, and like to see the best horse win. "As I said, the Cashier had lots of friends, and they were used to seeing him get the worst of horse deals that they didn't think much about it. But his horse looked as though he had a chance to win, and in a minute there were dozens of them ready to fight if necessary, to see that he had fair play. "A lot of them got together and gave Evans to understand that the race would be run on the square; that if he wanted to start any trouble by way of rounding out the festivities and making the celebration a success, why go ahead. "You've been trying to rob the Cashier," was Black Don't ultimatum, and now if he can beat you, he's got his chance."

"So far as that goes I don't think Evans had planned anything but a fair race, because he knew the temper of the crowd, and moreover, he had figured on running against the Cashier's mare. Even as it stood, he was pretty sure to win, for his horse had won several races, while Ten Spot, though he looked all right, had never been in a race. "Ten Spot acted a little nervous at sight of the crowd, and Evans didn't fail to notice it. "Just before the start he hunted up the Cashier, and offered to bet a thousand dollars. The Cashier shook his head. "Hold on, you are!" answered Evans, "afraid to back your own horse?" "What are you running your horse for?" he asked. "To make sport for the crowd and to win if I can," the Cashier answered quickly, "but that is no reason I should bet more than I wish to."

AMUSEMENTS.

BRAND NEW SHOW NICKEL TODAY.

Today the Nickel will show a brand new bill of motion pictures, a new talking picture, and there will be no music in fact it is to be an almost complete change from Monday. The leading film feature will be an elaborate production of the Roman drama "Virginius," and a ten minutes' tour of the famous Zoological Gardens of Frankfurt Germany where all the animal wonders of the world are held in captivity. This is a most instructive picture. There will be new comedy numbers as well. The talking Picture Company will present The Miner's Daughter, a play with numerous scenes in the mining regions of Pennsylvania and some excellent dramatic climaxes. The explosion scenes in the first act is a remarkable piece of stage realism. Miss Annie Edwards scored another distinct hit last evening in "The Old Yew Tree," which made such an impression here when sung by The Silver Shipper Company. Mr. Courtnay has a new picture called "The Old Yew Tree," which made such an impression here when sung by The Silver Shipper Company. Mr. Courtnay has a new picture called "The Old Yew Tree," which made such an impression here when sung by The Silver Shipper Company.

Two big acts at the Phinnoes Theatre today. Last night Sam and Richard, a team of colored singers and dancers, opened their engagement and made the biggest hit of any act yet at this house. Rachel May Clarke & Co. will make their bow to Phinnoes patrons this afternoon, presenting a very funny comedy playlet entitled, Honeycomb's Troubles. This company consists of Miss Clarke, assisted by Ellis, Heinemann and E. S. S. Lawrence and is the highest paid act ever played at this house. Each number of this little company are articles in their respective lines. This act opens at the matinee today. T. A. B. Wadsworth is singing a pretty little song, "Honey, Dear," beautifully illustrated. The pictures today are exceptionally good—five dollar pictures and every one a feature. Avoid rushes. Attend the matinee.

Orchestra at "Star" tonight. The up-to-date little Star Theatre in North End will have its orchestra again tonight, and a new show of the very best motion pictures procurable, the leading feature of which will be the Trip on the Rhodesian Railway in South Africa. Mac Colyer will sing the new hit ballad, "This Rose Brings My Heart to You," and during the evening the complete returns of the civil election will be thrown upon the curtain. Altogether the Star has a rattling fine bill.

Only a smile. Only a smile that was given me, On the crowded street one day, But it faded from my mind, And the burden of pain I bore, And the voice of hope I could not hear, Tho' I listened o'er and o'er.

But there came a rift in the crowd about, And a face that I knew passed by, And the smile I caught was brighter to me, Than the blue of a summer sky; For it gave me back sunshine, And it scattered each sorrow thought, And my heart rejoiced in the kindly warmth, Which that kindly smile had brought.

The old Providence depot, Boston, one of the old landmarks of the city, was to have been blown up with dynamite on Tuesday morning, under the direction of the division superintendent of the railroad. It was covered with dynamite and wires leading to prevent debris falling into Park Square. It was built in January, 1878, at a cost of $100,000. Its Victorian Gothic style of architecture marked a new era in depot construction in the country and attracted many visitors. Its tower was 146 high.

"What, has this steak been cooked?" "Yes, sir, by electricity." "Well, take it back and give it another shock."

"Ain't you afraid to stay away from school, Johnny?" "Not me—father's broke his arm and can't lick me."
