

In Memoriam

IN MEMORY OF LITTLE FAVORITE OF MAMA AND MAMMIE'S, DIED MAY 17, 1884, AGED 3 YEARS.

When she was blue and sunny And Mac-daddy was the green, And singing birds and babbling brooks Made life a joyous scene...

She was the youngest of the group Who dwelt within that home, Her voice was ever full of glee, How could we hear her woe?

'Twas more than eight her little feet Would patter through the hall 'Twas coming, up to you, 'Twas her sweet happy call.

'Twas for you, bright-eyed darling, For you'd the angel band, And they will never greet her Till they reach the golden strand...

Beneath the daisied sod she sleeps But we know she is not dreaming, Her happy spirit is in flight Where sweetest beams are streaming...

And who are left on this earth to mourn With its shades of light and shade, Will hail the day to meet our part Where flowers shall never fade...

Then mother, not mother, for thy child In heaven she's happy now, She's learned to play the golden harp And has jewels on her brow...

Selected Serial.

ONE COMMONPLACE DAY.

BY PASTOR.

CHAPTER XXIV.

A TOUCH OF THE WORLD.

Beyond a despondent exclamation at first, when she read of her daughter's name as being spoken in the midnight streets of Chicago...

To describe the various vicissitudes which thrilled her sensitive soul, would be difficult thing. Sorrow, dismay, despondency, indignation, relief, all these followed.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

Her eyes that first had gazed at his bright, Meet now the face of Christ the Lord, Boded in his deathless light.

know what her father would say? What he said was, "Why, nothing tangible, or sufficiently definite for her full back upon now. He had shaken his head over many gatherings to which Mildred had been invited."

And Mildred had written her joyous letters after that about the Ely social, it was pleasant to join the dancers than it had been to stand in a corner and look on.

She was introduced last evening to a friend of Leonard Farrar's son. He came occasionally to the socials. He asked an introduction to her because she was such a graceful dancer.

"Think of that, mamma," the happy girl had written, "when I ever went to dancing school in my life. I told him so, and he said that it was natural for flowers to have sweet odors, and for birds to sing."

Well, the days passed, and one day while Mildred was praying, there came to her an epiphany. She knew nothing about it before. It was just a week or two before the close of the summer term, and she was sad at the thought of going away from associations which were fraught with tender memories.

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

After that, the "euphonious" name had crept into almost every letter; curiously, too it was nearly always connected with dancing. "Mr. Alredale and she led the set."

cause her daughter held out hopes to him that he would be able to realize. The first step toward right-doing was to return to the business in Chicago which he had so long neglected.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

He had a very short time to spare. I suppose it was an eternity to Mildred, poor soul, who had no other thought than the mother and child. He did not dare say so in words to her loyal daughter—almost a pity that he had not—but he bowed about the idea, until it left her impressed.

All this is pardoned in hungry Jack. Will it be as early condensed when John, M. C. or L. D., sits among the eminent men of the country fifty years from now? Many of the laughable eccentricities of elderly people are nothing more or less than the juvenile misdeeds of their parents, or the innocent pranks of their grandfathers.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

I have known learned professors who picked their teeth and cleaned their nails in company, tipped back in their chairs, and uttered sentimental yawns, regardless of the ladies present. And it was once my good fortune to sit at table with a lady learned in Anglo-Saxon and Chaucer and wise in English literature, who plied knife, fork, and spoon with snob astounding celerity that to my dazzled eyes she seemed to use all three at once.

Read This, and Consult Your Own Interests!

The Best Soap in the World!

For only Two Cents a Pound!

Saves the Hands, Time, Clothes, Labor and Expense.

THE CANADIAN LABOR-SAVING LAUNDRY SOAP costs but two cents per pound to manufacture, and any person can make 100 pounds in 30 minutes. The ingredients which compose it can be found in any town or country village.

Why Canadian L. S. L. Soap Should be Used by Every Housekeeper!

Because it saves more than one-half the labor of washing, and the ordinary wearing out process of rubbing the clothes in pieces on a board. Because a washing that usually takes from early morning to middle afternoon by the old process, may be completed by half past five, the clothes out to dry, the house in good order, and comfortable for the day, and the family saved from washday annoyances.

Because it is the best article known for removing Paints, Grease, and stains of all kinds, and for prints and colored clothes it is especially desirable, as it brightens and fixes the colors, and is warranted not to injure the fabric in any way whatever.

Because it may be used in hard or soft water, it does not strain the clothes out of their life, and the most delicate lady can do a washing with less trouble than would be required by the ordinary soap.

Because it is free from anything the least injurious to clothes, hands or health. It is a sure cure for Chapped Hands, and other skin diseases, and excellent for removing dandruff from the hair.

Because it is so preferable to all other kinds of soaps or compounds for cleaning wood, iron, brass, and floors, and gives a beautiful polish to silver-plated ware, tin-ware, brass, and iron.

For Ladies to Read!

For the housekeeper and her help, in the household, and for the lady who has her own laundry, this soap offers great advantages in economy of use, in its effect on the skin, and in its freedom from injury to the fabric.

For House Cleaning

This is where the Canadian Labor-Saving Soap is the best. It is a perfect cleanser, and it is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

For Laundry and Kitchen Use.

Just think of the saving of time! No need on Washday! The soap is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use, that it can be used by the most inexperienced person. It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning.

It is so effective, that it can be used for the most difficult cleaning. It is so easy to use