LADIES' COLLEGE NOTES.

SACKVILLE, March 13.—Seldom has a more enjoyable evening been spent in Sackville hall than on Friday, when Miss Ayer's violin pupils gave a recital. The stage was tastefully arranged with potted plants in bloom, the grand piano was open to its widest extent and the large band of Beethoven, from his red velvet background, seemed to look less sardonic than usual and even to smile on the fair scene below. While the inevitable tuning was in progress, a large audience assembled, so large that a number of extra seats had to be brought into the aisles. People were shown to their places by ushers in dainty white dresses and carrying wands, decorated with white ribbons and flowers.

The "Impressions" were there in force but on this occasion were pretty quiet, probably in deference to Miss Ayer, who is a favorite with the boys. They would persist however in chewing the pungent peppermint to a most overpowering extent but perhaps they intended it for success.

The opening allegro by the advanced and junior orchestras was played with a precision and finish that showed great care on the part of both pupils and teacher.

Miss Florence Stockton, who, in her quaint blue gown, looked like a dainty china shepherdess, gave a vocal solo with good expression but the song was a trifle heavy for her voice.

The waltz by Misses Johnson, Boal, and Fairley, tripped off in fine style and seemed to leave a very inspiring effect on the toes of the audience.

Miss Lillian Johnson's violin solo was excellently rendered and her calm selfpossession was most enviable.

The then advanced orchestra played a charming accompaniment to Miss Ayer's cello, the soft deep notes of which sounded like waves on the shore and the violins were at the murmuring of tall pine trees.

Miss White, looking very cosy and bonnie, gave a reading in her usual happy manner. Her selection sadly needed a climax, but as she looked and spoke well she received a hearty encore, as indeed did nearly every member of the class.

The three violin solos by Misses Florence, Dorothy and Susie Wood were all extremely good. Miss Susie was perhaps the most noticeable from her extreme youth. Her little chubby hands that one might suppose would be more at home dandling a doll, never faltered, and she played her first solo in public with the ease of a veteran.

The young men of the class gave a rondo, the repeating movement of which was listened to with pleasure.

Miss Harriet Chappelle played a difficult piece on the piano and played it well.

There was a chorus, led and trained by Miss Lacks, the air was the old familiar Rose, Walts and was certainly suitable for the rose and garden of girls' evening dresses. There were some very sweet pieces and their clear enunciation was noticeable.

The Welsb quartette was one of the features of the evening. The cradle song they gave was so dreamy and soothing with its rocking measure, that your eyes closed in spite of yourself. Perhaps the close air of the hall had something to do with it, for it was uncomfortably warm, on account of the close light dress, I suppose.

The mandolin ensemble was played principally by picking the strings and was a capital imitation, you quite expect to hear the mandolin thrown open somewhere and flowers showered on the timid lower.

The last number, by the advanced orchestra, was a very taking melody and was rendered with the harmony and finish that characterized the whole concert.

Mr. Raymond Archibald gave a solo by request. Owing to ill health he was unable to perform, but his playing is such that it is a pleasure to him under any circumstances.

It is a matter of deep regret to every one that Miss Ayer has decided not to return next year. When she came here three years ago, this department was in a rather languishing condition, but she came with a new and better plan, and she has made it a most successful one. She has not only secured the services of the celebrated blind player, but she has also secured the services of a number of talented young women, and she has made it a most successful one.

At the close Mr. Landon announced that for some time in April he had secured the services of the celebrated blind player, but she has also secured the services of a number of talented young women, and she has made it a most successful one.

On Saturday evening an entertainment of a very different sort was given by the ladies of the school. The program was a most successful one, and the ladies of the school were very successful in their performance.

Mr. J. A. McDonald, of Moncton, was a guest in our midst for several days last week.
