HON. MR. MURRAY CONCLUDES ADDRESS IN BUDGET DEBATE; HOT SHOT FROM MR. PINDER

cent. basis, which included the Central railway. It would be found that every interest of the province had been well safeguarded and the project would be carried out on a sound financial basis.

Looking to the future, we have magnificent visions of the development and prosperity of our fair province with its pleasant valleys, smiling hills, rushing brooks, mighty rivers, placid lakes and ocean bathed shores. The hon. member for St. John (Bentley) some times gave utterance to sentiments worthy of himself and one such occasion was when he said he would like to have a photograph of the premier's visions of the future of New Brunswick. That was an ill-timed assumption of wit. Any man of intelligence can see in the near future great development and prosperity for our beloved province.

New Brunswick was the hub of the busy expanding east. When her sons look back to the homeland, they see this portion of the Dominion forging ahead by giant strides and those who have faith in her future feel the thrill of pride in this advancement and they rejoice that at last New Brunswick was to take her rightful place among the great provinces of our great Dominion. This was a land good to live in, a province deserving of the best possible government. In the honorable man who occupied the position of premier and in the government associated with him, the province had capable, sincere, earnest, honest men who giving their very best to their native province and whose administration would be more and more appreciated by the people the better they understood the manner in which the affairs were being administered. The hon. gentlemen of the opposition hope to persuade the people to entrust the reins of government to them. All that he need to ask was, can the people of the province expect even a fair measure of good government by returning to conditions which existed in the years previous to 1908 by returning to power the remnant of the former discredited administration. Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?

Mr. LaBillette's Poor Form.

Mr. LaBillette said that he would not be doing justice to himself or credit to the constituency which he had for so many years represented, if he did not take up some of the time of the House to refer to the important matters in the budget. He would like first to say with a full knowledge of the business ability and political experience of the governors of the province in past that the present hon. governor would walk in the footsteps of his predecessors and fulfil the duties of his office in a very creditable manner.

the people would be so pleased with that platform that they would rise in their might and make a change in the government of their province.

Mr. Pinder's Good Speech.

Mr. Pinder asked for the indulgence of the House for only a few moments while he referred to a few matters which he thought would be of general interest.

He had listened with deepest attention to the honorable gentleman who had just taken his seat and had expected something from him different from the usual run of opposition speeches. He had known the honorable gentleman for the past twenty-five years, and knowing him so well and the government of which he had been a member he was surprised at the character of the remarks the honorable member had just made. He was surprised at this criticism so called, of the present administration.

He presumed to tell the government what they should do for the province. He would have them put telephones in every house and thought they ought to pay school teachers more. He would ask him why he and his government did not carry out such a programme.

It was perhaps interesting to remind the honorable gentleman that his leader in those days, now happily past, was a director of the telegraph company and that might give a clue to the indifference of the honorable member in all these years to government owned telephones. He had only to refer to this matter to show how insincere the honorable gentleman was who was now advocating such a policy. He was a member of a government which was the most corrupt and rotten the province of New Brunswick ever had.

Serious Charges.

He (Pinder) remembered how public works were manipulated. He remembered when the province was made for calling for tenders for a bridge, separate tenders for the sub-structure and superstructure and the contractor was to put in tenders for both and he would get the contract at his own price, which was always a good one, on the plea that his was the only tender for the complete structure. Contracts were also altered after they had been awarded so that their friends could make a few thousand dollars extra. These were not matters of hearsay but were facts within his own knowledge and the knowledge of the ex-Chief Commissioner.

These things were all done away with now and during the past two or three years when the present administration had an opportunity to undertake some reforms and an advanced policy the province had prospered and advanced as never before. Among the changes of administration beneficial to the people which had been made, he might mention the auditor general's report. Today that report gives the fullest information as to how the public moneys are spent. In the old days it gave practically no information and it was impossible to get information for the people. In those days the heads of departments were allowed to carry provincial accounts in their own names and members of the government were permitted to use thousands of dollars of provincial money for their own needs some of which was not paid back yet and he supposed never would be.

Burked All Inquiry.

The hon. members of the opposition made strong professions of what they would do for the country if they had the chance, but when they were in power they did not think of country, they only thought of themselves and their friends. He well remembered when as a member of the opposition on the public accounts committee he would try to get information about the expenditure and was headed off at every turn. He remembered well when he made a particular charge of misappropriation of public funds in connection with the Kent county matter, how the then member for that county (Goggin) was assisted by the provincial secretary who when he attempted to shut off the investigation, it was so with every matter and it had been only since the change of government that the people had any idea of the mismanagement of the public funds under the old regime. Now all was changed. Any information asked for either in the House or in the accounts committee was immediately given in the fullest possible manner. He had been greatly surprised and gratified of the members of the opposition on the budget, and he had supposed that with the record they left behind them they would not dare criticize the present administration. It was true there were only a few supporters of the old government left in the House and so far as his knowledge went, he believed that after the next election

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

While his hon. friend from Kings (Hon. Mr. Murray) had made a good speech, as he always did, it must be apparent that he labored hard to convince the people of the capable government his administration, but he had failed to do so. The government was a disappointment to its supporters in this House and throughout the country. The hon. members naturally expected that great things would have been attained with a record revenue, but an over-expenditure of $58,000 was admitted and if the amounts paid out since the close of the fiscal year were included, that over-expenditure would reach nearly $258,000.

Already over two-thirds of the grants for public works had been expended and important public works were yet to be completed.

The old government had a grant of $170,000 for public works and had placed $20,000 of that amount in a sinking fund. Any reasonable man could well understand that the old administration did not wisely well with such a small grant in carrying on the affairs of the department. He must give credit to the hon. premier for considerable shrewdness. With approaching elections, his hon. friend was stinging a sort of optimism or great development. Why did not his hon. friend display this optimism throughout the past four years, and why had not these great projects been commenced? The teachers of New Brunswick were leaving their profession on account of the small salaries they received. Not only was the government to blame for this condition, a great deal of the responsibility rested with the taxpayers. Some movement should be made to remunerate teachers to an extent commensurate with their duties.

Favors Smaller Revenues.

If the crown land department continued their present policy of looking for increased revenue they would lay the goose which was laying the golden egg. It would be better for the province to have $25,000 or $30,000 less revenue annually and conserve crown lands. What was true of numbers of the wisest true of the whole. Unless the protection of game is improved, and the ideas of the opposition adopted, the province would soon lose that valuable asset. During last winter the destruction of game on the North Shore had been so great that it would make the hair of any man stand if he realized the existing conditions. The chief game warden should reside in Campbellton instead of in Newcastle. There had been continued violations of the game act by officers under the present government, and those guilty of the crime should be punished.

The destruction of game in the summer months had also been extraordinary.

A Good Word for Acadians.

Something should be done to have the Acadian schools of the province placed on the same footing as the English schools. There was a disposition on the part of the French people to learn the English language. There were no people prouder of British institutions than are the people of this province.

The government should introduce rural telephones to destroy the isolation of farmers. The government should place the farmers on the same footing as the people of the towns and villages.

Sewars of the Auto.

The report of the agricultural commission contained no reference to the wheat policy of the government. Under the old government great assistance had been given to this branch of agriculture. In 1900, as a result of the encouragement given by the old administration the wheat crop amounted to 504,310 bushels, while in 1911 as a result of the negligence of the present government, the wheat crop was only 364,771, or about 50 per cent less. The government should take active steps to encourage the farmers in wheat raising.

The government owed much of the prosperity of the province to the farmers, and one day should be set aside for automobiles should not be allowed on the public roads. Not being able to purchase their goods, the farmers were afraid of accidents which might take place in meeting automobiles on the road, and were sending to outside departmental houses to purchase their goods.

His honorable friend the Attorney General, might laugh at this statement but when the government would go before the people it would be "laugh well who laugh last."

Immigration Discussed.

For 29 years he had held a seat in this House and in all that time he had never objected to bringing in of immigrants no matter what country they had come from, whether they were English, Scotch, Irish or French or what nationality they were, and he did not intend to object to the immigration policy proposed by the present premier, but on the other hand he did not want to see the door shut to our own young men when a proper colonization policy particularly in the northern section of the province where there were fine lands suitable for colonization purposes along the line of the International Railway which might be acquired and with a proper policy there was no reason why the same progress should not be made as had resulted from the colonization work of the government of Quebec. It was all right to bring in settlers from the southern portion of the province but the government should not shut the door on the northern part of New Brunswick to the young men of this country. One of our young men was worth five of those which might come from anywhere else.

Predicts a Change.

There was need of better colonization work in the four northern counties of the province, Restigouche, Gloucester, Victoria and Madawaska had made great increases in the population during past ten years. As an instance of the failure of the policy of bringing people out from the Old Country as settlers here he could point to Balmoral, in the county of Restigouche; 65 families had been brought out from the British Isles and now there was not one of them there.

It was better to spend $20,000 in purchasing suitable land for settlement by our own young men than to spend the same money in bringing a lot of settlers here, many of whom would not remain but would go to the west. This was a fine province and when the leader of the opposition crosses the floor of the House in a short time, he will inaugurate a policy that will take the province out of the rut it is now in, bring back our own people from where they have gone and prevent our young men from going to the west. He knew of a platform which would be submitted by the present opposition leader and he was sure that

WILLIAM HAWTREY HAS CAPTIVATED ST. JOHN

That Mr. Hawtrey and his clever associates have captivated St. John theatre patrons was evidenced again last evening when an audience even larger than on Thursday filled the Opera House. It is evident that none who can avoid it wish to forego the rare privilege of seeing such a talented artist as Mr. Hawtrey. To say that last evening's audience was delighted with the performance would be superfluous.

"Dear Old Billy" is undoubtedly one of the most delightful comedies ever seen here, and capacity houses are anticipated at the performances this afternoon and tonight.

Why buy mixtures known as alum baking powder when you can just as well, and at no more expense, get Magic Baking Powder? The ingredients are plainly printed on each package. See if this is so on the others. All grocers are authorized to guarantee that "Magic" does not contain alum.
