

Wedding and Signet Rings

WEDDING RINGS have been in use from very early days. At one time a signet was set in the ring to imply that the spouse had the right of sealing up the household goods and, occasionally, with similar import a small key formed a part of the ring.

The signet ring was, of course, originally the actual seal of its owner. We often read of a king's signet being handed to a servant as a symbol of the royal authority.
