To Anglicans in Canada

ONE of the few volumes dealing with Church matters that find interest in the lay mind is "Leaders of the Canadian Church," written by a number of Churchmen, and edited by the Rev. Wm. Bertal Heeney, B.A.

THE editor's object was not to make an episcopal record, but to conserve the force of some of the great personalities which have appeared in the past of the Anglican Church in Canada, and to set their influences working on the lives of Churchmen of to-day. The fact that the ten men chosen were bishops was merely incidental. They are depicted by ten different writers, who were desired to disregard the episcopal trappings and let personality shine forth. Consequently one gets a series of fresh, bright and memorable biographical sketches of men who have been of importance to Canada, as well as to the Anglican Church.

THE book contains ten short biographical sketches, with portraits of Charles Inglis, Jacob Mountain, John Strachan, John Medley, John Horden, William Bennett Bond, Edward Sullivan, Maurice S. Baldwin, P. Phillip DuMoulin and James Carmichael. These were all mighty men in their day, and several of them have scored their names deeply in the history, not only of the Church, but of the country also. A work of this kind is able to follow the development of the country in a more lucid manner than many books of history.

cobble-stones from the street. "There's Carrot's, too," he added.

"Wonder who that little chap is—the one that seems to have so much to say to the car men," Theo replied, thoughtfully.

"That's Tom Steel. You've heard of him, hain't ye?" A man at Theo's elbow was speaking. "He's responsible for this strike, I think, an' I hope he'll get his pay for it too," he added, grimly.

Theodore glanced up into the grave face of the speaker and recognized him as a motorman. Evidently, he was more bitter against the strikers than against the company.

The car was now close at hand, and all at once as with a single impulse, there was a surging forward, and the crowd closed in blocking the track with a solid mass of human beings. The motorman set his teeth hard, and rang the gong loudly, insistently. The conductor hastened through the car and stood beside him. The only passenger was a policeman, who stood on the rear platform calmly gazing at the sea of angry, excited faces on either side.

"This car's got to stop!" shouted a big, brawny fellow, springing onto the step and giving the motorman a threatening glance.

"This car ain't a-goin' to stop!" retorted the motorman, grimly, as he released the brake.

"We'll see about that," and with the words the big fellow seized the man's arms and wrenched his hand off the lever.

The conductor sprang to the assistance of his comrade while the policeman ran forward and pushed the man roughly off the car.

In the same instant, Theo saw Carrots snatch a box from a bootblack near him and with a wild yell of defiance, hurl it through one of the car windows. The shrill, taunting cry of the boy, mingled with the crash of the breaking glass, and the sight of the policeman's upraised club, aroused the mob to sudden fury. At once there arose a wild hubbub of shouts, yells and cries, followed by a shower of cobble-stones, and a fierce rush upon the three men on the car, and in two minutes the car was a shattered wreck; the motorman and conductor were being hustled through the crowd with threats and warnings, while the policeman's club had been wrenched from his grasp. He drew his pistol, but with a howl of fury it was knocked from his hand, and the next moment he lay senseless upon the ground, felled by a savage blow from his own club.

A certain old lady, who was about to celebrate her golden wedding, said:—

"Pat, it will be our golden wedding next Wednesday. We should mark the occasion. Shall we kill the pig?"

Her husband looked up in surprise. "Kill the pig? What's the good of murdering an innocent pig for something that happened fifty years ago?"
