

THE BRITISH THRONE.

The Line of Succession is a Very Long One.

King Edward's order-in-Council, just promulgated in a special issue of the London Gazette, giving his sanction as sovereign to the marriage of Princess Alexandra of Cumberland, of Brunswick and of Great Britain, to the grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin—a sanction required under the terms of the English royal marriage law in order to render the union in question a valid one—may be said to signalize the advent of a new dynasty into the long list of heirs to the throne of England.

There is no crown in the world that has such a varied assortment of foreign princes and princesses that are in the line of succession thereto as that of Great Britain. They include the present German Emperor, his children, his brother, Prince Henry, and his sisters, one of whom is Crown Princess of Greece, whose children, one of whom will be the future King of Greece, are through her likewise in the line of succession to the throne of King Edward. Then there is the Grand Duke of Hesse and his sisters, one of whom is the Empress of Russia, whose four little daughters are all now among the eventual heirs to the British throne.

In addition to these there is the Crown Prince of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, whose mother, Princess Augusta, the old grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, since the death of her brother, the Duke of Cambridge, and of her cousin, Queen Victoria, is now the only surviving grandchild of King George III. of England. Her son's two daughters, one of them now Crown Princess of Montenegro, and the other married to the French druggist's son, Count Jametel, are also in the line of succession, and might in certain eventualities inherit the throne of England.

Then there is the reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg, a grandson of Queen Victoria, his sister, Princess Alice of Albany, who married Prince Alexander of the other day at Windsor; Princess Ernest of Hohenlobe, another of Queen Victoria's granddaughters, and her children; the King of Wurtemberg and his daughter, married to the Prince of Wied; also Prince Victor and Prince Louis Bonaparte, their sister, the widowed Duchess of Anjou, and her little boy, Prince Humbert of Italy. Count of Salemi, now about 15 years of age, their rights of succession coming to them through their father's mother, who was Princess Caroline of Wurtemberg. Nor should I omit the Duke of Brunswick and Cumberland, with his children, among them his oldest daughter, Marie Louise, married to Prince Maximilian of Baden, future Grand Duke of that country.

The Crown Princess of Roumania, who is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria, and her children would be in the line of succession to the British throne had she not forfeited her rights in connection therewith by marrying a Roman Catholic. The English law does not object to a prince or princess of the reigning house wedding a member of the Greek church, a Jewess, a Mahometan or a member of any Christian or non-Christian faith. But ever since the act of settlement, in 1701, which forms part and parcel of the British constitution, marriage with a Roman Catholic carries with it forfeiture of all rights of succession to the English throne, to the contracting parties and their descendants.—Marquise de Fontenoy in N. Y. Tribune.

LIGHT ON THE LAMPS.

Careful Housewife Keeps Her Lamp Trimmed and Steady.

It is not an uncommon thing for women who are fastidious in other matters to pay little or no attention to lamps except to fill them when necessary and trim the wicks when they become uneven.

Lamps should be kept perfectly clean on the inside as well as on the outside. They should be carefully examined and filled each morning, and when necessary cleaned out and trimmed. The burner of a lamp should be especially looked after, but this is the part most often neglected. The fine holes in it, or the "gauze," through which the gas is admitted, should be kept entirely free from oil and dust. The little machinery which moves the wick up and down must be cleaned out when necessary. The lamp is in the large brass lamp with a tube for ventilation running clear through the fount to the burner, so that the air ascends to the wick from beneath, be careful to examine this space, for it is likely to become choked with dust and burned off particles of the wick.

If the wick needs trimming, take a match of smooth bit of wood and gently rub it over the edge of the wick, after turning the wick down until the metal tube holding it is on a line with the lower edge of the burner, so that the air ascends to the wick from beneath, be careful to examine this space, for it is likely to become choked with dust and burned off particles of the wick.

When the inside of the fount is found to have a sediment, the residue of oil should be poured out and thrown away, and strained and used for other household purposes, such as cleaning moulder or damp woodwork in the cellar or in the combination with boiling water and soap for cleaning the iron sink in the kitchen. Use only the best and clearest oil for lamps. Cheap kerosene often gives off a very unpleasant odor and does not burn brightly.

Never leave a lamp turned low. It creates gas and uses up as much oil as when it burns brightly. If it is necessary to have a lamp during the night in a sick room use a tiny night lamp and burn it at full force.

In a country house where a large number of lamps are used, it is better to keep them in a little closet by themselves than to expose them on a shelf in the kitchen, where they are sure to collect dust.

A BIT OF DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

"There's a mint of money waiting for the man—or the woman—who will invent a sock that won't wear out," said the man with an economical turn of mind. "I can't afford to buy a new pair of socks every time my toes poke a hole through a sock, and I hate to have my wife spend most of her time darning for me."

"I am worse off than you," declared the economical man's unmarried friend, "for I've got no wife to darn for me. 'But,' he went on, 'I've found a way to make my socks last more than what you might call their normal life. It's simple enough. Don't wear the same sock on the same foot more than one day at a time. Put to-day's left sock on the right foot to-morrow, and so on."

"I've been astonished at the amount of extra wear I've got out of my socks by this easy method. It has saved me many a darning bill at the laundry, and if you will try it, your wife will have less darning to do."

The Marine "Minister of the Interior"

The comfort of the passengers depends, perhaps, more on the vigilance and executive ability of the chief steward than anyone else. He is who orders the supplies for a voyage, has a minute knowledge of what the store-rooms and refrigerators contain, and sees that the menu for each meal is ample, well cooked, and daintily served. He makes arrangements in port for the entire trip, plans each day's meals at sea, and, with the assistance of the chef cook, gets up the menu card. You will find him in his office, just off the grand staircase, making up his books and records; but during the rest of the day he is all over the ship, now taking a look at the store-rooms far below to see that groceries and provisions are rightly served out to the cooks, now inspecting the refrigerators to note the temperature, and again watching the butchers with precise knowledge of how meats shall be cut, and seeing that they are delivered to the cooks on time and in the right quantities.

All these things he is responsible for; but that is by no means all. He must also keep a minute record of all transactions of this sort, and must have a watchful eye upon the passengers to note that his lieutenants among the men are giving them prompt and cheerful service. He has a record of every passenger travelling with him, and all the details connected with his journey. If you sailed with him last year or twenty years ago, he can refer to his books and tell you the date of the voyage, its duration, your room and seat at table, and just what stewards served you.—From "Stewards of an Ocean Liner," by Wintthrop Packard, in the May Booklovers' Magazine.

That Dodd's Kidney Pills Cure Promptly and Permanently

All Forms and Stages of Kidney Disease—New Brunswick Man Tells of Terrible Urinary Complaint Banished Once and for All.

St. Mary's Ferry, York Co., N. B., April 25.—(Special.)—Thomas Harrison, a well-known resident of this place, adds his testimony to that of the thousands who have proved that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure promptly and permanently in any form or stage of Kidney Disease. Mr. Harrison says: "Some years ago I began to suffer from pain in the back, accompanied by a lethargy impossible to overcome. I was attended by a physician, but continued to grow worse, and began to pass bloody urine. "On the advice of a friend I started using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and by the time I had taken one box I passed a stone which is now in the doctor's possession. "Three boxes of Dodd's Kidney cured me completely, and though it is now years since I was cured I have had no return of any complaint. "Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys, and with sound kidneys you need never fear urinary complaints."

USEFUL HINTS.

I have occasionally been troubled with head aches in the jaw, says a writer in Good Housekeeping. My new maid placed a large sheet of brown paper in the bread jar, creating it well, so that the bottom and sides of the jar were lined. The paper is replaced two or three times a week (a fresh one). It absorbs the extra moisture and we have no more mouilly bread.
I always keep in my medicine cabinet a small phial of antiseptic powder and a roll of antiseptic gauze. I find that sprinkling a burn or blister of any kind with this powder and applying the gauze and then piece of oiled silk, is much better than salve. It dries and heals like magic.
An excellent work apron has a full ruffle across the bottom to stand out and protect the dress skirt, and it has a pocket, not a little patch pocket, but a real one set in the seams. The breadths are gored just enough to get good pieces for making the pocket.

Russian Czar.

How has it come to pass that an autocrat, who is a sincere lover of peace and who has the control of affairs in his own hands, has brought his country to the verge of war? In the first place, it must be remembered that the Russian Czar is a statesman in other forms of government, does not always foresee the ultimate consequences of their decisions, and are able to find themselves, unexpectedly in a situation from which war is the only means of exit consistent with the national interests and the national honor. Even the pacific Mr. Gladstone let himself be drawn into the Egyptian campaign, and afterwards drifted dangerously near to a great war with Russia. It must be remembered, further, that the autocrat form of government has its drawbacks as well as advantages in matters of foreign policy. It does not require to watch and be guided by the ever-changing currents of public opinion, and it can therefore adopt a political doctrine in a deliberate and not nearly so independent of popular sentiment as is commonly supposed, for its strength lies in its being the representative of national conceptions and national aspirations, and it is false to suppose that these it weakens itself. He would be a very bold Czar who would sacrifice a great national interest to love of peace or any other personal feeling. If ever a Czar was justified in disregarding the views of the ultra-patriotic section of his subjects, it was Alexander II, when he accepted the decisions of the Congress of Berlin, in order to avoid a great European struggle; but there is no doubt that that wise, courageous act diminished his popularity and prestige. Whether Nicholas II. has inherited all the civic courage of his grandfather remains to be seen.—Cor. London Times.

ABSENT TREATMENT.

How a Baby Was "Treated" at 100 Mile Range.

A young mother left her baby with her obliging mother-in-law one night, in order to attend the wedding of a relative who lived in a town about a hundred miles distant. The young woman, apparently free from all family cares, spent an enjoyable evening; but just as the newly-wedded couple were preparing to depart on the midnight train, an expression of acute anxiety flashed across the young mother's countenance. "Oh, George!" she exclaimed, clutching her husband's arm, "there was one thing that I forgot to tell your mother to do for the baby, and he'll never go to sleep without it. You must go right out and send her a telegram."
"Nonsense," said George; "this isn't the first baby she's taken care of."
"But, George, she'll never think of doing just the right thing, and the baby is so perfectly trained that he won't accept any substitute. I know he's crying hard at this very minute."
"She was right. A hundred miles away a weary grandmother was at her wife's side because she could think of nothing that would pacify a wailing infant who was most wretchedly sleepy yet utterly unable to fall asleep. She was packing wearily back and forth in the nursery to the accompaniment of her grandson's howls when the door-bell rang and her daughter-in-law's telegram arrived. Tearing it open, she tired, perplexed grandmother read:
"Lay baby on his stomach in the crib."
Two minutes later the baby, adrift as to his liking, was sound asleep.—Greenwood Watson Rankin, in Leslie's Monthly for May.

A Stern Chase.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. It is now curable by a new discovery pronounced by a local doctor and prescribed local remedies and by constantly falling into the local physician's hands. It is incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only remedy on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. GREAT AGE OF LIQUOR TREES.

A history of one of the sequoias of California, as shown when it was cut for lumber, is given by a United States Senator. It was but 18 feet in diameter, while many of them are twice that size. In 245 A. D., when it was 516 years of age, a forest fire burned on its trunk a scar three feet in width. After 1,196 years of placid life, in another fire in 1441 A. D., the tree, aged 1,712, received another injury. Another scar followed in 1850, and was not covered with new tissue for 56 years. The worst attack of all was in 1787, when the tree, then 2,068 years of age, was attacked by a fire, which left a scar 18 feet wide, reduced by 1800, in 103 years, to 14 feet. Only ten isolated groves of these trees remain, and only one grove is protected by government ownership.

INTOXICATED WASPS.

Wasps have a great fondness for over-ripe fruit, especially pears, plums, and sweet apples. The sugar of these fruits has a tendency to pass into a kind of alcohol, in the ordinary process of rotting, and after imbuing large quantities of this liquid the wasps become outrageously intoxicated. They crawl away in the grass in a semi-somnolent condition and remain till the effects have passed off, when they will go at it again. It is while in this condition that they do their worst stinging. A person receiving a sting from one of these intoxicated wasps will suffer severely from nerve poisoning for days.

For the past few years walking sticks have been more generally used by the gentlemen of the frock coat. They will, however, be seen on all occasions during the spring and summer season. The well-groomed man carries his walking stick to business for service all through the day, and the man who spends but a few hours about the business district of town likewise leans on his stick.
Some are of white walnut, stained with acid to the taste of the owner. English furze is very popular, as are likewise the Madagascar and cherry. Park-ridge wood and the pimenta are sought, and oak is always in demand. It would be quite impossible to say what style of handle is most favored; each is good if not clumsy in treatment.
