WHEAT DUTY IN GREAT BRITAIN.

A British duty of two shillings a quarter on wheat would not make any perceptible increase in the price of the British workingman's bread. Two shillings a quarter is six cents a bushel, or one-tenth of a cent a pound. The flour in a two-pound loaf would not cost half a farthing more in consequence of the duty. If the rate on wheat from the colonies were 50 per cent. that of the general tariff on wheat, the increase in the price of bread would be altogether negligible. In this country the price advances as promptly by way of adjustment to a rising wheat market as it does anywhere. Our bakers seldom make a rise of five or even ten cents an occasion for marking up the price of the loaf or diminishing its size. They usually wait until the upward movement in wheat has gone farther. Then it is their rule to rectify the price of bread so as to cover fully the advance in the price of wheat. Again and again in recent years have British consumers had to bear such price revision, for wheat has been on the ascendancy throughout the great part of Those who oppose the idea of a wheat duty on the ground that to tax a staple foodstuff is to increase the cost of manufactured products imagine that the United Kingdom is now getting the benefit of free trade in wheat. As a matter of fact there is no such thing as a free trade price for wheat. The market price for wheat, even in Liverpool, would be far lower than it is if there were no tariff protection in the world. A few years ago the United States seemed to be assured for a long time to come of the supremacy as a wheat-exporting country.

It now looks as if the United States might soon cease to be a contributor on any considerable scale to the wheat supply of other countries. What has happened? The United States manufacturing industries have made such tremendous strides, the army of their employees has so swollen, that the domestic consumption of wheat is rapidly coming into equilibrium with domestic production. The great expansion in the United States manufacturing industries is to be credited largely to protection. In nearly every wheat exporting country the manufacturing industries have the benefit of protection, and the home market for wheat is becoming more and more capacious.

This the price of wheat is being steadily lifted by the action of Customs tariffs framed for the fostering of manufacturing industries. Wheat is a commodity that has got far above the free trade basis of price. The British consumer is paying for his wheat a price that can be safely estimated to be thirty or forty per cent. more than he would have to pay were there no protection of manufacturing industries in wheat-producing countries. British free traders are in the habit of pointing to the fact that the British farmer is in less straitened circumstances now than he was fifteen years ago, that the cultivated area, instead of continuing to shrink, is beginning to expand. What is the explanation of this? Simply that the prices of foodstuffs have advanced, carried up by the great growth of wage earners' demand in wheat-producing countries that have the benefit of protection.

Hence the British artisan has to pay protectionist prices for his bread, and has to sell his labor at free trade prices or not sell it at all. If there were an actual British duty on wheat it would probably not make a cent's difference in the price of bread. What the British working man wants is not bread on charity terms, but work enough and wages enough to enable him to afford bread at the world's market prices. This he can never hope for so long as his own industry is left exposed to the tidal waves of German and United States competition.

Misfortune for the Bloodless.

Misfortune for the bloodless—that should be printed in all the public places. You must have blood to have strong lungs to enable you to withstand all the dust and microbes of summer and the piercing winds and cold of winter. Consumption is, properly speaking, lack of blood; the natural result of anaemia. To prevent consumption rich blood is necessary. The best way to protect the organs is to circulate this rich blood through the lungs. Many have been saved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because these pills are a remarkable blood builder; not indirectly but directly—with each dose. They have cured thousands of cases of anaemia; great sickness; general debility and all other troubles arising out of poor blood.

Death of C. Y. Johnson.

The death of a highly esteemed resident of Wolfville occurred on Monday evening, when Mr. Charles Y. Johnson passed away at the ripe age of 75 years. Mr. Johnson had been in failing health for some time. He was a native of this town, a son of the late William J. Johnson, who represented Horton township for several terms in the local legislature. The death of C. Y. Johnson was a loss to the community in every public work. He was a good neighbor and friend and will be much missed. He leaves one brother, Andrew H. Johnson, of this town, and five children; Arthur C., Wolfville; Harry, New Mexico, and Herbert D., who resides on the home- stead, and Miss Jennie and Miss Mary, who live at home. His wife who was Miss Clara Murphy, of this town, died several years ago.

Announcement

The American custom of "coffee for breakfast" is gaining quite a foothold in Canada, with the result that there is a largely increasing demand for a coffee of really good quality.

In order to meet this demand I decided some time ago to put up a coffee the quality of which would be fully equal to the best that we are accustomed to get when we visit the United States.

It has taken a full year to make preparations, to secure and install the most improved machinery, to decide, after innumerable tests, on the exact standard of coffee which would be most pleasing in flavor, strength and fragrance, and to select and import the highest grade coffee required. This has all been done, and the coffee is now being sold under our brand, "Estabrooks' Red Rose Coffee."

Not only is the coffee of a very fine quality, but we have been fortunate in finding a new and greatly improved process of manufacture; crushing instead of grinding, a process which removes the chaff or skin of the bean and breaks the kernel into small, even grains. This is described on the label of the tin, and will be described more fully in later advertisements.

You know the success that has attended "Red Rose Tea," a success due entirely to the superior quality of the tea and good business methods. Every guarantee made on behalf of "Red Rose Tea" will apply to "Red Rose Coffee." It will always be just as represented.

Our travellers are just starting out, and it will be about two months before they can visit all the merchants in the Maritime Provinces. By the end of that time we expect to have the coffee in practically every store that sells Red Rose Tea. In the meantime, if you will write and give me the name of the merchant you deal with, I will see that you can get a tin at once.

It is put up only in one grade and only in sealed tins; 1 lb. and 1/2 lb. 40c. per lb.
