

House of Too Much Trouble. In the House of Too Much Trouble Livef a lonely little boy; He was eager for a playmate, He was hungry for a toy. But 'twas always too much bother, Too much dirt and too much noise, For the House of Too Much Trouble Wasn't meant for, little boys.

And sometimes the little fellow Left a book upon the floor, Or forgot, and laughed too loudly, Or he failed to close the door. In the House of Too Much Trouble n the House of Too Much Trouble Things must be precise and trim-n the House of Too Much Trouble There was little room for him.

He must never scatter playthings, He must never romp and play;
Every room must be in order
And kept quiet all the day.
He had never had companions,
He had never owned a pet—
In the House of Too Much Trouble
It is trim and quiet yet.

Every room is set in order-Every book is in its place, And the lonely little fellow And the lonely little fellow
Wears a smile upon his face.
In the House of Too Much Trouble
He is silent and at rest—
In the House of Too Much Trouble
With a lily on his breast.

REFRAIN FROM WORRYING.

It Makes Wrinkles Which no Amount of Massaging Can Erase. of Massaging Can Brase.

Bad temper and worry will trace more wrinkles in one night than hot and cold bathing and massage and complexion brushes and creams and lotions can wash out in a year's faithful application. Physicians assert that an immense amount of nerve force is expended in every fit of bad temper; that when one little part of the pervous extended with the control of the pervous extended to the of the nervous system gets wrong the face first records it. The eyes begin losing the lustre of youth, mus-cles become flabby, the skin refuses to contract accordingly, and the in-evitable result is wrinkles, feminity's fiercest and most insidious foe There is no use attempting to reason with a woman about the evil effect of ill-temper while she is in an ugl mood. She knows perfectly well that of ill-temper while she is in an agy mood. She knows perfectly well that it is bad form; that it savors of the coarse and underbred; that it is weak and belittling and immoral, and that it hurts her cause to iose her temper. But she does not stop at just that time to think about it, and to remind her of the fact only adds fuel to the flames.

But when she is cool and serene and at peace with all the world, if you can convince her that each fit of temper adds a year to her age by weakening her mental force and by tracing crowtracks about her eyes and telltale lines around her mouth, she will probably faink twice before again forgetting herself. For no matter what she asserts to the contrary, woman prizes youth and beauty above every other gift the gods hold it in their power to bestow upon mortals.—Adele E. Shaw, in the May Woman's Home Companion.

Trifles.

Triffes.

It is the little things that count in life. In the household, in the daily expenditures of life and in the necessary buying for personal belongings, which is every woman's lot, the large sum outlayed for an article of size does not eat into the hoard half so much as the dozen and one they articles which must be had, and which seem so little and insignificant by, themselves that they are thought unworthy to be counted, but which end by making the entire sum laid out for the "sundries" vanish, and not infrequently take a good-sized silce out undries" vanish, and not infre-ently take a good-sized slice out some other division, says an ex-

In the same way the "little things" In the same way the "little things" are the very marks of that refinement which is desired by every woman as a characteristic. The gown may be elegant, the hat expensive, but the little details, a well-fitting shoe, a neat glove, the fresh ribbons or laces, all these things, tell the invariable tale of delicate taste and a knowledge of the effect of dress which is the essence of style.

A Stylish Coiffure.

Women's hair at the present mo ment looks so very charming in the evening that the woman of the past must bitterly regret that she is not young nowadays. The very daintiest and most becoming way for a girl young nowadays. The very daintiest and most becoming way for a girl to arrange her hair at the present time is to put a ribbon through a small diamond buckle and to the it around the hair, behind the fringe, so that it just stands up a little wee bit. The color of the ribbon must either be white or match the dress. SUMMER FINERY.

Mrs. Blank—They were driving so fast I didn't notice that. But the woman had on a Scotch mohair and wool jacket of turquoise blue, last year's style, with stitched lines, a white pique shirt, with deep circular flounce, a satin straw hat, tilted and rather flat, trimmed with hydrangeas and loops of pale blue surah, and her hair was done up pompadour. Stitched Belts.

Stitched belts, fastened with a small buckle or tiny pin, seem to find favor with a large number of women, who usually manage to wear what others have overlooked. These made in black velvet, stitched in white satin or in silk to match the color of the gown, give an exquiscolor of the gown, give an exquisite finish to the waist. Remember that they are made extremely narrow, sometimes not more than an inch wide.

Suggestive Hints in the Matter of Preserving Good Looks.

Sweetness and purity of breath, a great consideration in everybody, depend upon two things a good digestion and undecayed teeth. Habitual indigestion is a great foe both to health, beauty and amiability. It takes the suslight out of the heart, as well as out of the eyes. The beauty of the teeth depends largely on the healthulness of the stomach, and no dentifice in the world is capable of working miracles, or of keeping the mouth and teeth in good condition, when the stomach is chronically in a very bad condition. "Joy is one of the greatest panaceas in life. . . , a more positive means of prolonging life than all the vital elixirs in the world. Laughter is the most salutary of all the bodily movements; for it agitates both the soul and the body at the same time, promotes digestion, circulation and perspiration, and enlivens the vital power in every organ."—Hufeland.
