Two shall be born the whole wide world And speak in different tongues and have no thought

Each of the others's being, and no heed. And these o'er unknown seas to unknown Shall cross, escaping wreck, defying death;

And all unconsciously shape every act, And bend each wandering step to this one

And read life's meaning in each other's eyes. And two shall walk some narrow way of

Ever so little space to left or right, And yet with wishful eyes that never meet,

Calling in vain to ears that never hear, They seek each other all their weary days, And die unsatisfied; and this is Fate.

It is probable, however, that he will eventually be forced "by circumstances over which he has no control," to follow the Austrian Emperor's example, and to modify the order which he has just given. For otherwise the most awkward contretemps will frequently occur. This, for instance, until the rules in the subject at the field, and the general verdict repeated over court at Vienna were relaxed, it often happened that the wife of the ambassador or envoy accredited by Austria to a foreign capital had never enjoyed the honor of presentation to the Empress of Austria. A notable case in point was that of Baroness von Schwarz-Senborn, whose husband was Austrian Envoy at Washington in 1875. Although of spotless character, she had, owing to her bourgeois birth, never been admitted to the honor of presentation at the court of Vienna. This was only one case out of many, and, of course, disagreeable comments were frequently made on "So much for hesitating to appear before | the alleged discourtesy of the Austrian foreign courts envoys whose wives were

As a rule, after drying, the turf must be carted from four to six miles to the home of the peasant. This is done with the aid of donkeys and horses. If the peasant happens to be a speculator, he carts the turf into Tralee or some other market town and sells it. Turf is measured by what are techically called rails. This word indicates a donkey or a horse load. The load is held in place on the cart by means of wooden frames set into mortises on the sides of the cart. The turf is piled to a cone on top of the cart, and is held in place by sugganns. A suggann is a rope made of straw. These ropes are also used in some parts of Ireland to hold the thatch in

It is interesting to watch the process of straw rope making. One man sits on the straw by his side. He picks up a good sized wisp of straw and makes a loop by binding it in the middle. This loop he hitches over the end of a piece of hawthern shaped like a fish hook and with a shank six feet long. A piece of string is tled across from the barb of the hook to the shank, and in the corner thus made near the barb the loop of straw is hitched. Another man holds the end of the hawthorn stick. He walks backward slowly "Ay! I have seen the boy before," said turning the stick. Meanwhile the man Benjamin, who wanted little encourage- who is seated keeps twisting in more straw.
