Matthew Arnold's father, Thomas K. Arroll mas a distinguished scholar and matthew was born at Saleham. England in 1822. He sectived his education at Winchester, Rugby and Oxford. He was the first laurels in a prize poem called Cromwell." From the age of 24 to 28 he was private secretary to Lord Lans. down. He was also for a time inspector of schools. His first volume of poems was published anonymously in 1849. It was called "The Strayed Reveler and the Poems." This was followed by a second volume in 1852, and another under his own name in 1852. He was appointed four years later professor of poetry in the Language of Oxford. He continued to publish poems and critical essays, and works or education and other subjects.

Mir Arnold was indebted, perhaps, for his fame more to his "Critical Essays" than to any of his other works. In a controversy some years ago as to what is poetry he gave the best analysis of the poetic art, maintaining that poetry is a transfiguration of a thought, and citing a beautiful example from Wordsworth's "Ode to Immortality," wherein a thought of heaven is transfigured to a distant "immortal sea" to which the mind may go.

And see the children sport upon the shore, And hear the mighty waters rolling evermore. Several years ago Mr. Arnold visited America for the purpose of making a last of the poetrol art is mind and the word, and from it many be gathered as tipe sheaves for his Master above. Several years ago Mr. Arnold visited America for the purpose of making a lecture tour. He was everywhere hospitably received. A paper on America in The Nineteenth Century, and based upon observations made at the time of this visit, reaches this country but a few days visit, reaches this country but a few days before the news of his death. The article was not flattering, and has called out some very indignant protestations.

Whatever may have been his idiosyncracies, he was certainly a scholar of a very high order. The death of no scholar or critic in England could produce a more profound feeling there than that of Matthew Arnold.

Henry F. Gillig. Mr. Henry F. Gillig, who has been run-ning the American Exchange of New York and London, which has been closed up by order of the urt, suddenly left on the Cunard steamer Etruria for England immediately after the collapse. It is said that Mr. Gillig's lawyer to London, because that is the exchange, and that Mr. Gillig could be of more service in London than in New York. On the other hand, the custom house folks are surprised at Mr. Gillig's departure, as it was expected that he would soon be required to explain how he came to bring a liamond necklace into the country reently without duty.

Hotel Moving on Coney Island. With this is given a cut of the Brighton Beach hotel at Comey Island, near New York, as it appeared while being moved backward to get it away from the breakers. For some time the ocean has been encroaching upon the land till the waves broke under the hotel. It seemed that property worth $260,000 would have to be abandoned and washed out to sea to float about, a sort of Noah's ark, doubtless to the frequent astonishment of those who sail in ships. But engineers conceived a plan of putting the hotel on tracks and hitching a number of locomotives to it tandem, and dragging it back on to dry land. A building weighing 5,000,000 to 8,000,000 pounds is now being dragged back on to dry land. Of course the attempt was experimental. To move so large a mass without serious injury, especially considering its great length, it was necessary that the motive power be applied equally at all points of contact with the hotel. The first move was 6 or 7 feet. the second 24 feet, a third 25 feet, a later attempt moved the hotel 61 feet. When the full distance has been traversed, 595 feet of lawn and lanes and flowers will stretch out between the hotel and the ocean, and it is hoped that it will not have to be moved again for many years.
