Mayor Beck has a small gold locket in his possession for which he is seeking an owner. He had many callers on Saturday and found the locket in the mayor's office as he was about to leave the city hall. Saturday. The owner can secure it by calling up Mr. Robinson in the city clerk's office.

Engineer Graydon did not begin the work of flushing the pavements at night, as was at first intended, as it was feared the water would freeze on the asphalt and make it very slippery Today, however, Mr. Graydon had number of men busy at the work, and the pavements were certainly much improved by the washing. The men used an old hose-reel, and one of the old fire horses, which long since was passed over to the board of works, and the sight of the ancient outfit made Londoners smile as they mentally compared it with the up-to-date equipnent of Chief Clark's men nowadays.

CARLOS AND FOG IN RIVAL ROLES PROMOTED BY USING

Mr. Baker the Man for Galway Por'uguese King and "Mist" Were Supreme.

GLOOM THE WORST IN YEARS ?

Buses Run on Walks, Soldiers March 1 in Circles, and Prince Loses His Way.

London, Nov. 21 .- King Carlos and King Fog were keen rivals for supremacy in the preoccupation of the London public last week. It has been asked why the foreign monarch and the potentates who are habituated to sunny climes should be invited to visit England at a time of year when the country's atmosphere is quite the antipode of that to which they are acmstomed.

Leader writers local officials, and others who have had occasion to welcome the visiting sovereigns of Portugal have assured the royal guests that not even the penetrating damp chills of London fog could affect the warmth of their reception, and from such glimpses as were obtained of their majesties on Thursday, when they drove through the streets of the metropolis shrouded in mist, both King Carlos and Queen Amelia seemed to rise superior to the climatic conditions and o be in the best of tempers. "Good spirits, cold beef, and warm speeches" was the headline in one of the papers descriptive of the luncheon at Guildhall, where, at the special request of the King, barons of beef had been added to a usually more elaborate menu. When Carlos was last in Eng land he was asked what he liked most and without hesitation he replied: "Your beef first, your roast beef, and then your boiled beef,"

At the Guildhall luncheon the word went around that the King had asked for his favorite beef. Straightway beef became the fashion. Other delicacies of the table were forgotten, and be-neath the high pulpits in which two black-capped carvers of barons were health, after a visit to the Pond stationed, gathered crowds of waiters holding up their arms with plates that Both on the way to Guildhall from
