Patrick and Sheraton, will moreover, that under the Scott Act a has been so hampered by the Courts. Well, this to a certain extent may be true, but when will this hampering be removed. Are they persuaded that the law is workable? The experience of Fredericton is that it is not, and the Act has been in force here longer than in any other constituency in Canada, On its first adoption here, it was sustained by an overwhelming vote-two to one, but its warmest friends will not deny that it has largely lost ground. If the law has become useless, and we assert it has, what is the sense in continuing it.
