The Only One-Cent Morning Paper in Canada, and the Only Exclusively Morning Paper in the City of Toronto.

MONDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 14, 1931.
THE HAMILTON TIMES speaks of the coming of the hour of trial.

LINDSEY is prospering. She is putting in gas works, and will have six railroads running there when the Midland consolidation is complete. A daily paper ought not to be long in coming.

THE DUKE OF SUTHERLAND has just placed himself at the head of a company for the purchase of six square miles of land for the purpose of founding a colony of Scotchmen. At least we are told by an English journal. Somewhat Englishmen do not take much stock in this "blossoming colony," but pass it by for the neighbouring republic.

CAPT. CUTHBERT deserves credit for his pluck; we can say little for his judgment. The length of one's purse has a great deal to do with yacht racing, and on this score Mr. Cuthbert has entered the lists at a disadvantage. All his races, too, were sailed without sufficient preparation.

beat out of a shipyard and run her against the pick of a thoroughly equipped fleet, is not a safe thing to do, as has been proved in the case of the Countess of Dufferin and the Atlanta.

EDWARD GUNTER, the head of the iron founding house of Hamilton and Toronto of that name, and up to the last election a prominent Reformer, is one of the delegates from the former city to the coming Conservative convention. Mr. Geo. E. Tuckett, another prominent manufacturer of the ambitious city, and also a Reformer up to 1876, is also among the number. Sir John E. A. Smith is also among the number. Sir John E. A. Smith is also among the number.

THE GAOLER AND THE SHERIFF of Simcoe have been at logger-heads and Mr. Inspector Langmuir has held two or three investigations. Last week he held another at the request of gaoler Laing. Politics seem to have crept into the dispute, and the whole county, including the county town, Barrie, are ranged on one side or the other. The inspector is charged by the paper supporting Mr. Laing's case with exhausting his utmost energies to convict the gaoler. The last question at issue of interest to the general community is how much control should the sheriff have over the appointments of gaol officials. Perhaps Mr. Langmuir will have more recommendation to make on the matter.

THE MADRID REVIEW does not like the idea of the proposed consolidation of the Toronto and Ottawa, the Toronto and Nipissing, the Midland, the Grand Junction, the Whitby and Port Perry, into one road under the management of Mr. Geo. A. Cox. The Grand Trunk is at the bottom of the consolidation and the Review can see that no good is to come out of it. There are a number of Toronto men who have been directors of these lines, and who are also connected with other embryonic roads that will form a part of this new system, and it looks as if they were allying into the hands of Mr. Hickson. And it is further said that money is being made out of these "charter deals" by the head pushers, and one-time bonus hunters of these roads.

THE POLICE AND STUDENTS.
The police of this city are too ready with their batons. The mere sight of a band of singing medical students seems to put them into a highly excited condition, and they at once draw their batons and begin clubbing without discrimination.

We do not say that students are not given to playing pranks and becoming at times noisy on the streets; but certainly the way to cure the evil is not for a dozen policemen to rush at them with drawn clubs and begin slashing right and left without warning of any kind. Toronto has become a student or university city, and she must treat her students as do other such cities. In arts, mechanical and theology alone we have one thousand students, and this number is increasing every year. Not one of these students spends less than $200 a year in our city. Students are not clubbed in other university cities for singing on the streets, and they should be treated similarly here.

The police commissioners ought to hold a thorough investigation into the Thursday night fracas and find out who is really to blame.

Somewhat we imagine that too many of our policemen have got it in their head that they are an Irish constabulary force, whose principal duty is to disperse mobs with the aid of a club.

THE ASYLUM ROBBER.

Even More Extensive Than at First Supposed. Shaw's Confession—A Chain of Evidence Wound Round Michael.

The old man Thomas Shaw was last night discharged from custody by the police magistrate, the crown having no evidence to offer against him. Shaw, the storekeeper, has made a full confession of his guilt (as has previously been stated), seriously implicating Michael, who is now surrounded by a chain of evidence from which there will be no escape. Shaw's statement is that some time ago Michael had lent him a sum of money, which he was unable to repay. Michael then suggested as an easy means of repayment that Shaw should leave the door of the store-room open, so that Michael might help himself as he pleased. This Shaw consented to do, and the deliberate stealing had gone on for a year or fourteen months. Shaw confessed to have seen Michael take many of the stores away. What is missing has of course not been ascertained, and is the intention of the government inspector to send experts to examine the books of the institution as it is feared the loss will prove very much heavier than was at first supposed. Shaw will be sentenced on Monday to the police court, and it is not at all likely that he will escape with any lighter sentence than a term of years in Kingston penitentiary. This is undoubtedly one of the worst transactions that has been enacted here for many years, and the police deserve credit for the manner in which, from the slightest clues, they have succeeded in working up the case.

The general belief around town seems to be that Michael is a rich man, and wonder has been expressed that, if he is guilty, he should have engaged in the plunder as a mere money-making transaction. It is learnt on good authority, however, that Michael's property is heavily mortgaged, though he has a good deal of it, and that if it would realize but little after clearing encumbrances.
