It shows miles of trenches, the war as it really is. To make this production 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were employed—a more wonderful production than Ben Hur, as there are 5,000 scenes and 140,000 feet of actual photographic films. In addition a big Symphony Orchestra of thirty pieces furnishes the music, making the production realistic with the proper bugle calls. The picture is shown at the Academy of Music at 2.30 p. m.
