Canada.

I am the pride of the Empire, I
Give of my best to the Motherland.
Young men I breed of the strain of old,
Seeing afar with a prophet's eye
The land of my children's children.
A widespread and prosperous people
Stretching, a mighty and stalwart race,
North to the land of the Little Sticks,
South to the thunder of falling water,
Threading the fogs of the four-square Gulf,
Courting the smiling Western sea.
These are the sons of my children
Reaping the gold of the West,
Taming the roaring rapid,
Mounting the Selkirks' crest.
Look ye! the land that I leave them,
A heritage envied of kings,
Wealth that is theirs for the asking,
Health that the asking brings,
Wealth of the plain and forest,
Fortunes in mine and sea,
Riches from lake and river,
These do they get from me.
