

On the symbolic level, the three ministers have agreed that the participants will parade as one delegation and will wear identical uniforms. A crest would however distinguish the Quebec and New Brunswick components. In case of victory, the Canadian flag will be raised and the national anthem will be played. The component to which a participant belongs will be discernible at all times, including when a medal is being awarded, by the flags and crests of the component.

As with the Quebec Summit, a Federal-Provincial Committee has been formed to provide coordination and required concertations.
