79	PRISON PREMISES AND BUILDINGS—Continued.
80	American prisons, for the most part, too large	114
80	Such prisons obstruct individualisation	114
81	Prisons should be classified, so that, as far as possible, we should have—
82	1. Separate prisons for females.	115
82	2. Separate prisons for the young.	115
82	3. Separate prisons for different occupations.	115
82	4. Separate prisons for the worst class of prisoners.	115
82	Such a classification of prisons impossible without a central authority.	116

	SECTION FOURTH.
	GOVERNMENT.	116-133
	The title of inspectors a misnomer; they are governors	116
	Though not its immediate agents, they everywhere direct the administration,	116
	Their power extends to everything in the New York prisons	117
	Detail of their functions in New York.	117
	Compensation of inspectors in United States and Canada.	117
	State prison staffs and their duties.	118
	Salaries paid to American prison officers not liberal.	119
	Must be increased before men of suitable qualifications can be obtained.	119
	What are the qualifications?	119
	1. Prison officers should be men of strict sobriety.	120
	2. They should be men of mild and even temper	120
	3. They should be men of decision and energy.	120
	4. They should be men of humane and benevolent feelings	120
	5. They should have a sincere interest in the prisoners.	121
	6. They should be men of high moral principle, and be distinguished for industry, order and cleanliness.	121
	7. They should possess a good knowledge of human nature.	121
	8. They should be of incorruptible integrity.	121
	9. They should be men of experience	122
	10. They should be of a just and steadfast purpose	122
	11. They should be men of sleepless vigilance	122
	12. They should have a genuine liking for their occupation.	122
	13. They should be duly impressed with religious principles	122
	The higher the officer's position, the more varied his qualifications should be,	123
	Female officers should be distinguished for modesty and the domestic virtues,	123
	A majority of prison officers deficient in qualification.	124
	Causes of this deficiency—where to be sought?	124
	1. In the inadequate compensation paid.	124
	2. In the control given to party politics in our prisons.	124
	Political influence the dominating power in most of our state prisons.	123
	This eminently the case in Wisconsin and New York, especially the latter ...	126
	In making appointments in New York, little attention given to qualifications,	126
	Political appointments the radical defect of our prison systems.	127
	Private business never conducted on such principles	127
	The remedy lies—
	1. In discarding party politics from prison administration	128
	2. In making fitness the sole condition of appointment	128
	3. In establishing tests to ascertain the qualifications of candidates.	128
	4. In making the tenure of office permanent	128
	5. In authorising the superintendent to appoint his subordinates.	129
	7. In establishing a gradation of rank in office	129
	8. In the payment of adequate salaries	129
	9. In making provision for the superannuated.	129
	Modes of appointment to office in different states.	130
	Officers required to abstain from liquor and profanity	130
