EXCLUDE PUBLIC FROM HEARING

provincial uniformed forces would be in hand in case of emergency. A Knotty Problem. The holding of the hearing in chambers raises a nice problem that no one here tonight cared to solve off-hand. It was this: If the writ is sustained and Thaw set at liberty, the immigration officers have a right to enter the chambers and place him under arrest? E. Blake Robertson, assistant superintendent of immigration, is here ready to take Thaw in charge as soon as he shall be liberated. The problem is his to solve. With two assistants he will station himself in the court-house corridor, just outside the chambers, and watch the door like a cat.

Those with the gambling instinct dominant were wagering two to one tonight that the writ would not be upheld. At all these predictions Jerome smiled. "We are going to get Thaw," he said. "Maybe not tomorrow, but we will get him."

Jerome's Life Threatened. Many letters threatening Jerome's life have been received by him since his arrival here, but he has made none of them public. Most of them were written by cranks, and one, strangely from Chicago, had a particularly sinister tone. While Jerome takes such matters lightly, having received thousands of letters during his trial in New York, he is being guarded here constantly by private detectives retained by the State of New York. This afternoon a crank tried to enter his room, but was sent away with kind words and cajolery. After waiting in the lobby for half an hour he departed.

Thaw today sent the Protestant and Catholic bishops at the Sherbrooke Fair each a cheque for $50. On the whole he spent a very quiet day, receiving few visitors.

AN INTERESTING GATHERING

The Alpine Club of Canada held their camp this year in Mount Robson Park, British Columbia, on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The attendance was a very representative one and excellent alpine work was done. All the members of the camp feeling that they had had the best camp of their lives, and returned home looking forward to their next visit to the same district.

Among the members of the camp were a large number of distinguished mountaineers, who thoroughly explored the territory and who left with the impression that the new Mount Robson Park holds for the tourist and traveler the finest mountain scenery in the world.

The success of the camp will be a very large factor in opening up and bringing to the notice of the world that section of the Canadian Alps, and taking into consideration the large number of requests that are received at the head offices of the Grand Trunk Pacific for descriptive literature and information regarding the territory, the indications are that a large clientele are looking forward to a visit to this magnificent Alpine region at some future time. During the last year the Canadian Alpine Club, a resolution was passed by the members, which reads as follows:

"Resolved that the thanks of this camp, in meeting assembled, be hereby tendered to the management of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway for its very practical assistance to the club when holding its first camp in the Mount Robson district, and particularly to W. P. Hinton, Esq., general passenger agent of the said company, for much assistance and many courtesies towards that end."

"We desire to express our thanks to this very popular gentleman and his subordinates, who did all in their power to make the transport arrangements work comfortably and well."

The camp has proved a magnificent success, and the assistance here referred to has been a large factor towards accomplishing that object. We hope it will be the first of a great series of many successful and enjoyable camps, and that the fame of the region may, thru the efforts of the club, be spread abroad throughout the world."

Sinclair scored a second, but from this to the finish Old Country were the better team. Hutchinson and McKenzie each scored a goal.

A magnificent goal taken by Dean Elchened matters for the C. P. R., who ran out lucky winners.

The Banks and Circulation of Paper Money

By the new bank act which is now in effect an adjunct to circulation is permitted altogether novel. By circulation is meant a medium of exchange which acts as currency or real money. The circulation in Canada is largely made up of real notes of the chartered banks and Dominion bills, mainly confined to the $1 and $2 issues.

Under the old bank act the banks were accorded the privilege of issuing a circulation of their own bills up to the extent of their paid up capital. This in round numbers amounted to about $100,000,000 and these bills were kept out in the hands of the public pretty much all the year round. During the crop moving season, when extra money was necessary to handle the country's business, more bills than the law allowed were required and to provide for this under the Laurier government the banks were permitted to issue emergency currency up to 15 per cent. of their combined capital and reserves.

This privilege gave a latitude of some $30,000,000 in the new paper money, but during its use, which was limited to six months in the year, the banks had to pay the government 5 per cent. on the amount outstanding.

At the last session of the Dominion Parliament a clause was inserted in the Bank Act by which the banks could issue their own bills by depositing gold or its equivalent with trustees in Montreal.

Most of the gold in Canada is held in the Dominion treasury at Ottawa, and against it it has been issued bills of various denominations and which can be redeemed in gold by presentation of the bill or certificate. The Canadian banks for convenience and other reasons carry the Dominion notes as gold in their reserves. These notes, when in large amounts, such as $100,000, are known as "legals" and are recognized as a handy method of transferring gold.

With the advent of the crop moving season some interest is aroused as to which privilege the banks will adopt, the emergency circulation on which interest is paid to the government, or the issue against a gold deposit in Montreal. It is also a matter of much curiosity as to whether the banks will deplete their gold reserves now held in legal and specie by depositing them in Montreal and issuing bills against them.

W. D. Ross, general manager of the Metropolitan Bank, though the new arrangement for circulation was now in effect, as trustees for gold deposits had been appointed and accepted by the government. "We intend to make use of the new arrangement," he told The World, "as we are right up to our limit of issue now."

"Do you think the present reserves will be used as deposits against circulation?" Mr. Ross was asked to which he replied that the amount of cash reserves held was purely a matter of policy with each individual bank.

The World discussed the question with one who is not a banker, and this gentleman suggested that the new arrangement savoured considerably of what is known as pyramiding of building up two sets of notes on a story of Canada's progress is well told.
