FROTHINGHAM (OCTAVIUS BROOKS) The Life of Gerrit Smith. With portrait on Steel, and other illustrations. Octavo, cloth extra, (In Press.) . . . . .

The life of one who was an earnest philanthropist, a devoted worker in the anti-slavery cause, and a clear-headed man of business, who had an active and important part to play in the history and development of his native State, and in the reform movements of the whole country. The volume is of moderate compass, and presents in an artistic narrative the story of a life of unique character and value.

MAZADE (CHARLES de) The Life of Count Cavour. Translated by GEO. MEREDITH. Octavo, cloth extra, . . . . . $3 00

The life of Cavour is the record of the founding of the Kingdom of Italy, or rather of the forming of the Italian Nation. The biographer has brought to this work a hearty appreciation of and admiration for his subject, a full knowledge of the history of the time, and a terse, epigrammatic style; and the translation has been performed with taste and accuracy. The volume is alike indispensable to the student of modern history, and fascinating to the general reader.

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) The Myths and Marvels of Astronomy. Octavo, cloth. . . . . $4 00

Mr. Proctor is always an interesting writer, and has taken for his present work a subject that under the duller treatment would be fascinating reading. A large part of the volume is devoted to the Science of Astrology, which has itself produced a library of literature, and in the remaining chapters he discusses the long list of legends and marvels which the imagination of man has from time immemorial associated with the heavenly bodies.
