Once upon a time there dwelt in a large forest a lion and a mouse. The lion being of large stature and king of the forest despised the mouse and would not listen to the words of ad-vice and offers of assistance which were tendared by his lesser brother. One day there came to the lion a strange beast, which is called a cham-eleon, and which changes its color fre-quently. The chameleon spoke silky words to the lion, telling him of the fairer lands in more distant parts of the forest. He spoke of the larger markets and the higher prices till the siren-like voice hypnotized the lion, so den, Wilfred Henry Bourdon, Abraham Cohen (with honors); Robert John Driver, John McIntosh Duff, Grant William Langtree Carr, David Alexander Cameron, Vincent Joseph McElderry, Arthur Vincent Wood, William Joseph Maverty Cass, Thomas Moss, William Joseph McLarty, Robert Portcus Saunders, Errell Chester Ironside.
