answer, as he had to consult with Washington, and asked permission to translate the note into English forthwith, so that Senor Moret, who knows English, could revise and approve the translation. This was done. Gen. Woodford's only consent was the expression of his personal wishes for con-

That the president has less confidence of a peaceable ultimate outcome, some of those who saw him today said was apparent from the view he expressed to several of his closest friends. While he expressly refrained from stating that he had given up all hope, one of his close political friends intimated, immediately after being closeted with the president, that Dundas street and Park avenue, to a settlement on a peace basis seemed tender a royal reception to the grand exceedingly unlikely. The president is master of Ontario, Bro. J. A. Young, aware of the strong sentiment in congress, and is taking the leaders into his confidence.

A CRITICAL SITUATION.

Washington, April 1.-The members of the house were all in a state of suppressed excitement. Peace, members say, depends upon a slender thread. A prominent Republican of the house gave it as his opinion that the situation was more critical today than it ever had been. "The reply of the Spanish ministry received by the president last
