Caillaux Defends Himself and Admits He May Have Been Too Impulsive.

Paris, Feb. 20 .- That he had never championed a policy of closer relations with Germany, but one of "European conciliation," and might | cents. have been guilty of imprudence and impulsiveness, but never of intelligence with the enemy, proved to be the opening defence of Joseph Cail-laux, former premier, charged with treasonable dealings with the enemy, on the resumption of his trial today before the senate, sitting as a high court.

The examination of M. Caillaux covered his trip to South America late in 1914 and early in 1915;

"Experts will tell you I have not profited by this war; I am a poorer man now than I was in 1914," he declared, after reading a letter from Ed-mundo de Olivera, who was charged by the Brazilian ministry of foreign affairs to accompany M. Caillaux thru-out his visit to Brazil. In the letter De Olivera stated that M. Caillaux had always been a great patriot and hored for the final victory of France. The coming issue of Th hoped for the final victory of France. With consummate art, M. Caillaux, at times accusing himself and then pleading for errors which he asserted he committed as every human does, said he might have sinned too much from self-confidence and impulsive-ness. He declared that he had been taken in by clever rascals and spies in South America. M. Callaux show-ed deep emetican when the so called ed deep emotion when the so-called "Lipscher affair" was mentioned. He explained how he first received Lip-scher in 1914, when a press campaign was raging against him. Lipscher, according to M. Callaux, brought him documents to adding the press that We
