THE CITY'S DISGRACE

How much longer will the people of St. John tolerate a condition of affairs under the distribution of petty graft. Take as which advanced cases of tuberculosis canan illuminating example the fish and game wardens. One reads with amazement the names of men who received from $100 to $200 or more last year for their services as game and fishery wardens. Their neighbors never dreamed that these persons in quarters too small for a like number of children, the whole family living in quarters too small for a like number of even healthy people. The condition of this unfortunate woman was found to be such that it was necessary to render substantial esisetance. Aside altogether from the cruelty which consigns her to such conditions, the home is a centre from which the disease may spread, and the children around her are in constant danger of contracting the disease.

St. John cannot congratulate itself on the result of a comparison between its record and that of other cities. The death rate from tuberculosis in this city is much higher than in cities in the United States, with the exception of some in the south Here are some figures which should be studied by the people. In the year 1910, 113 people died in this city of tuberculosis. Let us compare this with some cities in the United States.
