WANTED A DIVORCE.

NEW METHODS EMPLOYED BY CHICAGO WOMAN.

French wife of a Chicago man who lives in the city of Chicago, has been successful in securing a divorce from her husband.

Chicago, Ill., July 28.—It has been learned that James W. Smith, who attempted to kill himself in the court room Saturday when found guilty of a criminal assault upon a little girl was a victim of a conspiracy. Smith's wife has confessed that she performed herself to convict her husband, who is entirely innocent of the charge against him.

Determined to Succeed.

Fall of a Brooklyn Parrot of Irresponsible Mirth.

A gray parrot that belonged to a family living near Prospect Park was the main subject of the neighborhood last autumn, says the New York Sun. It could sing and talk and a dashing miscellany of nonsense and sentiment. Its talk was so finished that listeners could readily determine whom in the house it was talking to. It had also reached that entertaining stage of bird education when it picked up new ideas with amazing rapidity.

The owner had occasion to visit Niagara recently, and took the parrot along. It was with the steward of the vessel, and the crew used to take turns in the forecastle in petting the bird and teaching it new accomplishments. It returned with its former captives in the steamer a month later, and was installed in its old quarters in the Brooklyn home.

The first time its owner entertained neighbors after he returned the parrot first of a violent vocabulary of oaths. The bird had picked the naughty accompaniment up from the sailors in the forecastle of the Niagara steamer. It seemed to get a huge delight in repeating with great vigor, and laughed in glee when its master scolded it soundly. The owner hurried to a bird fancier in the city, and he was discovered that he could not break the parrot of its new propensity to use bad language.

"Don't worry about it," the fancier said reassuringly. "Just scold the bird thoroughly the next time it swears and it will be all right."

"Well, the bird—do you think you'll scolded Polly, when the master scolded her?" the fancier asked.

The owner dashed at the cage, and shook it as hard as he could, while his wife and children looked on with interest.

"Violently. The moment the parrot began the parrot fell off the perch and landed on the floor."

"I guess that to shake all the bad words out of the bird's head," the fancier said.

CHICAGO'S LAST CALAMITY

APPELLING LIST OF CASUALTIES BY THE GREAT STORM.

Its Force Confined to a Path Only 400 Feet Wide—Whole Families Obliterated—Scores of Homes Destroyed—From Death-Chicago's Very Foundation Shaken by the Terror.

Chicago, Ill., July 28.—The wreck wrought by the furious storm of last night was seen in nearly every portion of the city to-day. In the west division the wind blew with the violence of a hurricane. It demolished buildings, uprooted trees and scattered refuse and debris in every direction. Hundreds of trees were blown down in Garfield Park, as out there the wind had its full force. In the north-west division it travelled in a diagonal direction from the southwest, and its destructive force was confined to a path perhaps 400 feet wide. Four new brick houses at Rockwell and Sixteenth streets were demolished in an instant, and it is said two men had sought refuge from the storm in one of the buildings collapsed on the street. They fell upon the roof, and were killed and seven people were injured.

Two families were almost obliterated at the corner of Rockwell and Sixteenth streets. The cottage on Fifteenth street and Washington avenue was blown to pieces. The family miserably perished, but for three hours it rained incessantly. There may have been such a deluge as never before in the history of Chicago, but there is no history to prove it. It was not a continuous rain, but a deluge of rain, and it was not a deluge of rain, but a deluge of rain.

The district north of the city was completely under water. Whole blocks of vacant land were transformed into a sea of mud. The streets were flooded like a lake. The water was so deep that it was impossible to walk across them. The water was so deep that it was impossible to walk across them.
